The most beautiful homes in Manhattan, The Hamptons, and Palm Beach have one thing in common. Us.

And because we do one thing, and one thing only, we do it very well. In fact, when it comes to securing mortgages, people say we're the best. We'll get you the perfect mortgage. You may only need us once or twice in a lifetime. But when you do, we'll be there. Call us. You'll see. There's a lot more to mortgages than just numbers.

Winter Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

1(888) 414 - DOWN

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Enter Sag Harbor

I'm Late, I'm Late For A Very Important Date The Gateway Clock Says

by Dan Rattiner

Those days when I could drive my no-muffler Jag down route 114 into Sag Harbor, past the elementary school at eighty miles an hour, slide noisily around the turn past the Stella Maris School and the St Andrew's Church, accelerate to a hundred past the police station and do a zigzag wheelie onto Bay Street and out to the end of Long Wharf are over.

Sag Harbor is going to slow me down.

How they intend to do this will not involve speeding tickets. The Village will install things that are so dangerous, narrow, interesting and intimidating that I will slow down on my own, purring like a pussycat as I look this way and that. Somebody in a Morris Mini behind me will be honking their horn, telling me to get on with it.

Here's what it will look like by this November, with the job completed, as you head down route 114 from East Hampton toward Sag Harbor into a stretch of road that the Village is calling "The Gateway" to Sag Harbor.

You will whiz down Route 114 at 55 miles an hour for the whole six miles from East Hampton, until the big yellow signs tell you you're approaching a populated area so slow down to 45 miles an hour and then 35 miles an hour and keep alert. At 35 miles an hour, you will have reached where Jermain Avenue reaches Route 114 and the elementary school is on your left just ahead. There will be kids at play signs, rumble strips in the road, flashing blinkers and, perhaps most interesting, a narrowing of the size of the lane you are in. The narrowing will be caused by the installation of a new eight-foot wide bicycle lane that will extend from this point on 114 all the way down to Bay Street and Long Wharf, a distance of about a quarter of a mile. (Very short bike ride.) Both lanes, one going into the village and one coming out, will therefore be four feet narrower than they were before. Even if you are a racecar driver, you will have to drive slowly and exert the greatest of skill to stay in your lane, which is the idea. You will sit forward in the driver's seat. You will be looking nervously about.

As entertainment along this quarter mile, there will be rows of antique iron street lights and antique iron park benches on sides of the road for its entire distance. And then, about three quarters of the way to Bay Street and Long Wharf, there will be what is called "The Gateway." This will be right at the corner where the big, abandoned, former Bulova Watch factory sits, broken windows and six stories high, waiting for its Superfund cleanup project to rid it of the toxins that that company caused to be thrown into the ground half a century ago. At this corner, at the corner of Route 114, Burke and Washington, there will be installed a beautiful new sign reading WELCOME TO SAG HARBOR. It is not designed yet so it is not clear if it will arch over the road or just be on one side, but it will probably contain an outline of a whale and some innocuous small print so that you have to slow down even more to read it. Also at this point, there will be the pride of the town. It will be a large, beautiful, antique clock. As you pass under it, (if it is overhead), or alongside it, (if it is alongside) you can note the time and see that you are late for wherever you are going.

The location of this "Gateway," by the way, is not where one might consider the official gateway to Sag Harbor to be.

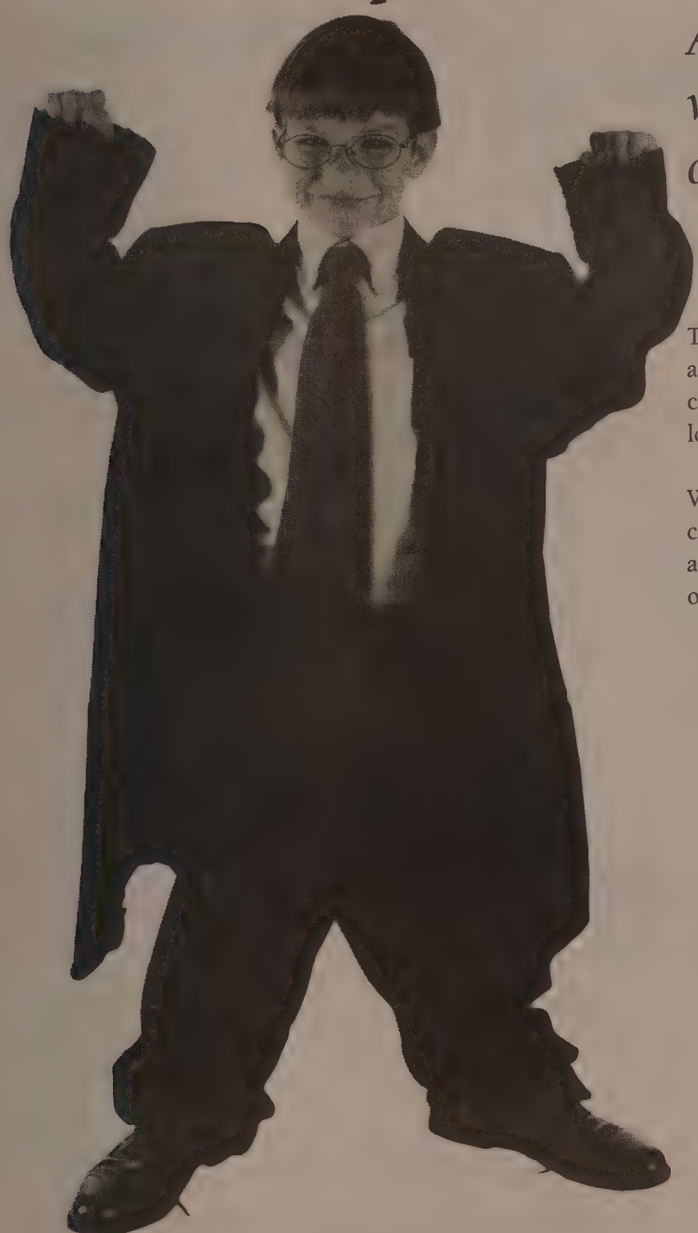
Looking for a mortgage to suit your needs?



At The New York Mortgage Company, we deliver personalized service with one person in mind . . . You.

These days, it seems that most mortgage lenders are simply not willing to tailor a loan specifically for borrowers with unique needs. As a direct lender, NYMC can be as versatile as you need us to be, providing hundreds of highly flexible loan products and innovative programs designed to accommodate your needs.

What's more, we make the entire loan process easier, quicker and more convenient by eliminating the red tape and bureaucratic obstacles that are often associated with borrowing from a large bank. Among the many different kinds of loans you can choose from at NYMC are:

- Interest Only Loans
- Jumbo Loans
- Bridge Loans
- Construction Loans
- Refinance Loans
- True No Doc Loans

and a wide range of others.

We also offer the best available rates, with fast approvals.

ARM APRs may increase after consummation. Offer subject to credit approval. Advertised rates are prevailing and are subject to change without notice.

Contact NYMC today, and discover why when it comes to your mortgage, we take things personally.

You can't speed up — truly this is the very cutest and adorable "Gateway" that could possibly be to the entrance to any village — so you'll just have to resign yourself to being late and explain yourself later.

Anyway, this clock is being built and provided free as a gift to the Village of Sag Harbor by the very Bulova Watch Company that used to be there, a company that is now a subsidiary of a larger company, with offices and factories in places such as North Carolina.

Further along, at Bay Street and the Long Wharf, this part of Route 114 comes to an end, as will all the antiques and clocks and rumble strips and bike lanes, and that will be that. You will be downtown now, in the middle of the biggest traffic jam you ever saw, going every which way in front of the Corner Bar. There's nowhere to go. So you'll just sit there for awhile, pondering the wondrous civic "traffic calming" devices you have just negotiated, and you will be curious to see what happens next. Nothing will happen next. You will be on your own.

The creation of this great "Gateway to Sag Harbor" will be underwritten by the State of New York Transportation Department, the Village of Sag Harbor and the Bulova Watch Company, who probably feel they are assuaging their guilt from what they did to the town by abandoning it forty years ago.

As for the State and the Village, this culminates five stormy YEARS of back and forth negotiations about what to do to slow down everybody who is racing through the village to get to the ferry at North Haven. Hip, hip, hooray.

The location of this "Gateway," by the way, is not where one might consider the official gateway to Sag Harbor to be. Most people come to Sag Harbor from the West, from New York City and Long Island down the Montauk Highway to the monument at Bridgehampton and thence down the Bridgehampton Turnpike to where the boundary between Sag Harbor and Bridgehampton is. At this point, there is a simple sign reading VILLAGE OF SAG HARBOR. In years past, in the summertime, there used to be a smaller sign hanging under this Welcome sign that read VISIT OUR MUSEUM. In the fall, however, when the museum would close, they would take this sign down and replace it with one reading CLOSED. So now for the winter months the sign would read VILLAGE OFSAG HARBOR. CLOSED.

But most people knew that's not what it meant.

There's still ANOTHER major entryway to Sag Harbor, which you get to by driving up to North Sea from Southampton and then right onto Noyac Road, a curvy highway that roughly runs parallel to the shore of Peconic Bay for five miles, through the Hamlet of Noyac and finally to the borderline between that hamlet and the Village of Sag Harbor. I don't recall a sign here, but I do recall lots of people with bumper stickers that read WELCOME TO NOYAC, GATEWAY TO SAG HARBOR, which it also is, since you have to pass through Noyac to get to Sag Harbor from the west.

As for what is the big gateway now from East Hampton, that comes into the Village from the Southeast, sort of a backdoor way in because it is fed by motorists who only come from East Hampton, Amagansett and Montauk.

But whatever. They built a gateway. Welcome to Sag Harbor. •

Save The Fields

An Important Charity Holds A Big Event At The Riverhead Aquarium

by Dan Rattiner

About four weeks ago, I got a phone call from John Roland asking if I would be his guest at a fundraiser in Riverhead.

"I have a table," he told me, "and I'd like you and your significant other to come."

John, who is a TV anchorman for FOX 5, has a beachfront house on Dune Road in Westhampton Beach, and is often asked to donate his time to charity events here.

"What's the charity?" I asked.

"It's an outfit involved in saving fields," he said. "They do good work."

I told him it was important to save the fields here. And I said we would come.

"I saved a field myself just last week," he said.

The next day, when I checked my diary, I saw that we had made a dinner date with some old friends, Barbaralee Diamonstein and Carl Spielvogel, for the same night as the fundraiser. It was three weeks away, and so I thought we could re-schedule the dinner date. It isn't often you have a major charity event on the East End in the wintertime. I called Barbaralee. She said she understood.

"What's the charity?" she asked.

"Saving farmland," I told her. "Fields on the North Fork I guess. It's very important."

"We called the police. And they gave us the number to the stranding hotline. They were there within fifteen minutes."

"Indeed it is," she said.

The night before the fundraiser, it occurred to me I did not know the time or location of the event. My significant other also wanted to know what she ought to wear. So I called John and asked him. In one of the wineries, perhaps?

"I'm wearing a suit and tie," he said. "It starts at 7 p.m. and it's at the Riverhead Aquarium. There's valet parking."

The Aquarium is brand new, and it's a huge facility with plenty of space. Just in the great hall among the exhibits, you can fit about 400 people. It's probably the biggest and best place to hold an event such as this in that town.

At the event, we found John and Joanna among the crowd, enjoying drinks and hors d'oeuvres served by waiters. Numerous celebrities were there and the flash photographers were taking pictures of them by the shark tank and the giant turtle pool. Most of the merchants and businessmen of Riverhead were there, including Gloria and Joe Ingegno, Sherry and Steve Patterson, and Terry and Richard Bach. When we sat down at our table for dinner, Wendy Khazzam of The Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation came over and was introduced to us. She thanked me, as publisher of Dan's Papers, for taking the time to come and I told her it was a pleasure to be there. It was a very elegant evening, indeed.

Most of the talk at dinner was about the sea mammal stranding facility that rented space at the Aquarium. The Aquarium itself was a for-profit organization, built by some Long Island businessmen. It has been open for just over two years, and is a big hit that has breathed new life into downtown Riverhead. Building plans to expand the aquarium are going forward.

But the major accomplishment for the aquarium, besides its educational program for the school children of the area, has been what it has done for the twenty year old sea mammal stranding and rescue service that had for a long time had a small infirmary for stranded animals in Hampton Bays. People would find an injured turtle on the beach, washed up, still alive. They'd call the stranding service. The aquarium has provided a large laboratory and seawater tank hospital on the premises that is ten times the size of the one in Hampton Bays, and along with the publicity the Aquarium has given the stranding service, has just about saved the program.

"You ought to go to the back of the aquarium and have a look at it," Dr. Bach told me. "They have big indoor windows so you can see what is going on with the recovering creatures and the volunteers."

Fully recovered sea creatures are returned to the sea, usually in front of a crowd down at the ocean. I told him we would do that.

John told me about his experience with a stranded creatures a month earlier. "We had an injured seal wash up right on the beach in front of our house," he told me. "Joanna and I ran out there. We didn't know what to do. We called the police. And they gave us the number to the stranding hotline (631-369-9829-ed). They were there within fifteen minutes."

"John named the seal John," his wife Joanna said. "After himself."

"Two of the volunteers came down there in an SUV with a cage in the back. They had a stretcher and a rope. And they roped him and brought him in. You know seals bite. Especially when they are injured. Tell people in your paper not to approach an injured seal or turtle. Just call the hotline."

Toward the end of dinner, John was called up to a battery of microphones that had been set up on the stone bridge crossing the shark tank.

"We have a silent auction set up down the hall there," he said. "Everything you contribute helps. One hundred dollars will pay for an x-ray of a seal flipper."

My significant other and I put in some bids on some picture frames and on a fruit basket.

On the way home, we drove along quietly.

"It was seals," she said. "Not fields."

I debated in my mind whether or not I ought to tell John Roland about this misunderstanding, but then, I thought, what the hell, let him read about it in the newspaper. Also, there are many worthy causes that need money on the east end, such as cancer research, the two local hospitals, Multiple Sclerosis and the Bide-a-Wee Animal Hospital. Also charities that raise money to save farmland or to support the Sea Mammal Rescue Service.

As a matter of fact, we have written about them extensively over the years, urging people lend their support.

We're no slouches. •

Hello, Hello

The Universe Stands Up And Takes A Bow For The Hubble Telescope

by Dan Rattiner

Astronomers unveiled an amazing photograph last week. It was taken by the Hubble Telescope in outer space and it shows little twirly universes over here and bright stars over there and it gives an overwhelming sense of how vast this place is and how small we are in it. There is no apparent up or down. It's what God might see if he were to step back and admire what he had made.

The picture, blown up to a size of a movie theatre screen, was actually unveiled from beneath a cloth at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. Scientists went to such lengths because the Hubble, which floats in orbit high above the earth, is on the government's list of "things we don't need anymore." Maintaining the Hubble will require a trip by an astronaut aboard a space shuttle with a wrench from time to time. The government would rather let it go and launch a bigger, better space telescope that can be maintained by robots, something they think they can get up there around 2015. But the scientists want to save their Hubble.

I publish this photograph above. The astronomers explained that it is a picture taken of just a small part of the night sky. They also point out that what we see in it are objects and universes that are not necessarily all there at the same time. Because these objects are at wildly varying distances from the Earth, and because the light from some of them must travel billions of light years different from others of them, the picture shows some stars as they are recently, and other stars as they were just after the Big Bang twenty billion years ago. The only frame of reference that might help you understand this is that the picture is like a time-lapse photograph of a group of people, some of whom were there early in the time lapse, and some of whom only showed up later, after the earlier group went home.

In other words, if you and somebody on one of those distant planets fell in love, one of you would likely be dead and the other just in love with you from years ago. Oh, forget it.

Here are some other things that were in the news last week. A jury found Martha Stewart guilty. Leaders in Iraq signed an interim constitution. The President of Haiti fled the country. And there's probably life on Mars.

I am amazed at just how far down in the news the item about Mars was. Practically nobody commented on it. I didn't see one single editorial about it.

Scientists monitoring the two Rovers scratching around on the surface of Mars have discovered clear signs that water was recently present there. The cold climate of the surface of this planet — which is farther away from the sun than Earth — has dried up the water. But below the surface, toward the core, Mars warms up. Nobody is going to be surprised if we discover water, and life, under the ground. With water you have life.

Martians could be a hundred feet tall or they could be the size of an earth microbe.

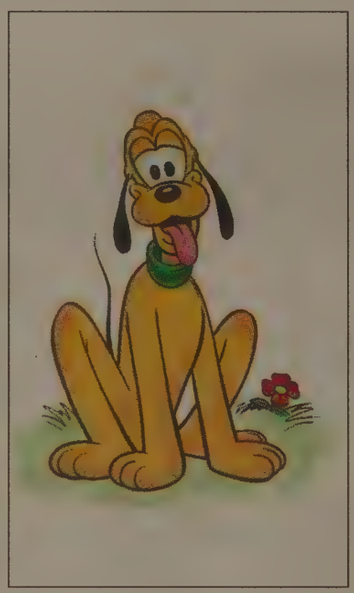
In the seventeenth century, when telescopes were first invented, long, straight canals on Mars, which looked as if they were man-made, were seen. Some people also believed there were still Martians there, tending to their world. Beginning around 1930, though, when telescopes became powerful enough to get a closer look, scientists concluded that the canals were just mountain ranges and valleys and that the place was cold and uninhabitable. And so we developed bigger and bigger telescopes. Somewhere, way out there, somehow, there had to be alien beings living on a planet who we could make contact with. There are billions of stars and planets. We just needed one.

We began sending out radio waves with messages in them into the cosmos — we still are — and we launched rockets with gold plaques in them that told of our existence in sign language, Braille and in sketches to whoever would come upon them — and these rockets are still hurtling through the universe. And we launched Hubble in 1989. Its mission included, as a primary objective, trying to find life in outer space.

Well, my goodness, life has apparently been there under our noses all the time. Right next door. What do you suppose we might find on Venus or some of the other planets? Hmmmm.

I know I am jumping the gun here, but consider this photograph taken from Hubble. Our very next door planet probably harbors life. We will dig down. There it will be. How much life would you care to guess is also out there everywhere else?

Neptune



Pluto

The earth is twelve billion years old. It was originally a ball of molten fire thrown off by the sun. Mars, further away from the sun, was thrown out earlier. Can you possibly imagine what this life beneath the surface of Mars is going to look like, having evolved separately from us for all these billions of years?

Think like an Earthling. They'll probably find grubs, and maybe small worms and beetles and things.

Now think like a Martian. They could look like ANYTHING. And they could have a highly advanced underground civilization with a peace-loving government and a space program that includes airlocks just under the surface of the planet, which open to the cosmos when they wanted to fire something off, which happens every three thousand years. And in a fourth dimension which is in addition to the other three.

Martians could be a hundred feet tall or they could be the size of an earth microbe. Their flying saucers could be the size of the head of a pin. Who knows?

Well, WE will, very soon.

See those guys over there looking through a telescope at the night sky? Look at the guy in the back. Short. Hairless. Pointy ears. One big eye in the middle of his forehead. See? He's planting a little microchip in the back of the neck of the guy in front of him. Look out for that guy. This, or something like it, is really going to be something we find out about in our lifetimes. •

WELL WE BETTER GO... SAYS SOMETHING HERE ABOUT GOING TO JAIL IF WE DON'T SHOW UP.
I KNOW WHAT THIS IS... IT'S LIKE AN EPISODE OF LAW AND ORDER.
WE'RE HERE TO REPORT FOR JURY DUTY.
WE THINK THAT WE'D BE VERY GOOD JURORS ON THE O. J. CASE.
THAT TRIAL IS OVER.
WELL I'LL HAVE TO TALK TO SAM WATERSTON ABOUT THAT ONE.

A Windy Saturday Afternoon Of Fun On Main Street In Westhampton

Look at this —you can hear them!

By Emily Weitz

The sun filtered down cold and bright from a crisp blue sky on Saturday, March 13, and the golden glow illuminated a parade of green. Green balloons bounced in the wind over green woolen caps and green plastic cups. Shamrock stickers abounded, sparkling on the pink cheeks of little girls and on the wrinkled skin of laughing old men. The Saint Patrick's Day Parade in Westhampton Beach, under the leadership of Grand Marshall Bob Stevens, was an opportunity for the Girl Scouts, the Rotary Clubs, and the fire departments from miles around to demonstrate their Irish pride, or perhaps simply their love of parades. I found that even I, without a touch of Irish blood in my veins, was swinging arm in arm with laughing strangers in celebration of the day.

Parades occur on most major holidays, and I find that they always share certain characteristics. There are always perfectly preserved vintage cars, possibly incapable of exceeding ten miles per hour, flaunting people who have perfected the art of waving. There are always marching bands. At most celebrations, the fact that a band insists upon moving would be unfavorable and quite inconvenient. This is not so at a parade, which is really just a moving celebration. Still, you can't get too attached to any one float or song or performance, because it will be gone in a few steps. Parades, it seems, are lessons in release. So are marching bands.

Perhaps the most integral part of any parade, though, is the presence of more fire trucks than would have been necessary to suppress the Great Chicago fire. These shiny red trucks with sparkling silver trim seem to emerge from the cracks, sirens wailing in happy announcement of their presence. Fire fighters hang out of the windows throwing candy to scrambling children, and the sirens' wailing sound of danger suddenly blends with the sounds of bagpipes and laughter to indicate carefree celebration.

In addition to the standard aspects of a parade, this is an opportunity for the host town to demonstrate its individuality. Westhampton Beach put an unexpected twist on Saint Patrick's Day with the presence of a Willie Nelson look-alike, a giant red Elmo, and a bunch of skateboarding cone heads. What do these characters have in common? I didn't know either until Saturday, but apparently in Westhampton Beach they are all very proud of their Irish heritage.

The Saint Patrick's Day Parade in Westhampton Beach began at noon on Mill Road and took over the town for the whole afternoon. Convertibles braved the deceptively cold afternoon, troops of Brownies with frostbitten noses carried their banners proudly, and the high school marching band overtook the street waving Irish and American flags. "The Star Spangled Banner" sounded from bagpipes, which struck me as the truly American sound of Saint Patrick's Day. One float pleaded for peace in Ireland, with reaching hands painted between the orange and green sections of the Irish flag.

The sirens of fire trucks wailed happily, the sound of bagpipes rose and fell, and the disciplined pounding of marching bands rolled past. The talented Irish step dancers pranced past with the agility and swiftness of deer as I stood on my toes to peer around a smiling, red-bearded man with a little girl with auburn curls on his shoulders. Green plastic cups overflowed with early afternoon Killian's, and every freckled face was flushed pink with the chill of mid-March. Restaurants advertised "after the parade" specials, and people sought shelter from the biting wind around tables of corned beef and cabbage to share pitchers of beer.

If parades are really just moving parties, Westhampton Beach's spirited celebration was no different. Complete with music, dancing, and laughter, this was a party in the streets. I danced out of the cold to the sound of a swinging fiddle, pondering the hope that perhaps somewhere lost in my lineage was a redheaded girl who could really lift up her kilt and jig. •

Life At Ross

The Wonderful Private School In East Hampton Cuts Back A Notch Or Two

By Jerry Cimisi

The recent announcement by the Ross School in East Hampton that it was letting go some of its faculty — in fact, a fourth of the faculty might be let go by the beginning of the next school year this autumn — was cause for some alarm on the East End.

Gerald Curatola, an East Hampton dentist whose three children have all been at Ross, said "For some reason, at least a part of the local press seems to give us very negative reporting." Curatola is also on the Ross School Board of Trustees. He added, "even with fewer teachers, Ross still has a better teacher to student ratio than most private schools."

According to Mary Ann McCaffrey, a spokeswoman for the Ross School, at the beginning of the 2003-2004 school year there were 65 faculty members. With 278 students in the school, that gave a ratio of one teacher for every four students. The school plans to add about twenty students by September. Even with the projected and possible dismissals, Curatola said the ratio should be between five or six students to every teacher. "Eventually we would probably have a ratio of six to one. Again, that is still an excellent ratio." Eventually the school plans to have about 420 students.

JPhoto By Jeff Goldber/Esto

Ross School

Courtney Ross Holst founded the Ross School more than a decade ago in order to give her daughter a superior education. She had inherited millions as a result of the unfortunate death of her late husband, Steve Warner, formerly president of Time-Warner. Ms. Ross remarried (her new husband is a European businessman) but her focus still seemed to be the school, which grew in size. (The school instructs students in grades 5-12.) She poured tens of millions of dollars into it. The planned dismissal of faculty members fueled rumors that these large expenditures (and perhaps the poor stock market of the past few years) were making her more conscious of how she spends her money.

This continues to be speculation. At any rate, the Ross School does not make public its budget, according to Ms. McCaffrey. Dr. Curatola said planned fundraising events as well as an annual appeal would be bringing in more money for the Ross School.

Looking at the statistics, the dismissals of teachers from Ross can hardly give the school a poor student-teacher ratio. Perhaps the larger issue with the Ross School must always remain its different form of education. Dr. Curatola spoke of the benefits he felt his three children had been given at Ross. "My daughter began there in the fifth grade and is now at Barnard. My son is a freshman in high school and he went to Brazil to help build houses for Habitat for Humanity."

This might sound a wonderful education if one has the means — after all, Ross is a private school — but Curatola related that more than half the school, specifically 54 percent, is receiving some sort of financial scholarship to attend. He added, "At the average private school you might find 18 percent of students on different types of scholarship, but nothing like 50 percent."

Ms. McCaffrey added that 43 percent of the first three graduating classes at Ross are the first in their families to go on to college—and that 95 percent of Ross graduates attend a four year college.

The statistics... show that of the current 65 member faculty, 41 have a Masters and 18 have a Ph.D.

She said that of the 123 students in the first three graduating classes, 486 had received acceptance offers from a wide spectrum of colleges, including schools such as Amherst, Annapolis, Barnard, Brown, Columbia, Cornell and Wesleyan.

A Masters Degree is not required for teachers at the Ross School, but most of the teachers there have advanced degrees. The statistics Ms. McCaffrey supplied show that of the current 65 member faculty, 41 have a Masters and 18 have a Ph.D.

Dr. Curatola said, "The Ross School was a big factor in my family's move from New York City to East Hampton. My children were in private schools in the city, but the education they received at Ross far exceeds anything they got in Manhattan."

Just what is the nature of the curriculum at Ross?

It is based on an educational philosophy called "Multiple Intelligences," a system of teaching and assessment pioneered by Harvard's Martin Gardiner. Ms. McCaffrey related that Gardiner's method does judge students not only on how well they can read, write and do math, but also on such factors as spatial abilities, how well they get along with others and their capabilities in music and art.

Dr. Curatola said that Ross prepares students to be "global citizens." The teaching curriculum at Ross focuses on history and culture; in fact, as the Ross website states, that is the "nucleus of the curriculum."

Fifth grade students begin with the study of the emerging river civilizations of the ancient world, which leads up to the Middle Ages by the eighth grade. On the high school level, the path — or, at the Ross School likes to put it, the spiral — from the Renaissance to modern times is studied, as eleventh graders reach the achievements and tensions of the modern era. Twelfth graders spend the year in reviewing this vast historical process, in which the past spirals into the present and then the future.

The Ross School does not grade students. Ms. McCaffrey said, "We do not compare students with one another."

The students are rated, however, on three broad levels: Distinguished, Proficient and Unsatisfactory — terms that are self-explanatory if somewhat imprecise and subjective.

The Ross School is not a state school so the students do not take Regents exams. They do take tests such as the PSAT and the SAT. When asked how Ross compared in such tests to the public school population, Ms. McCaffrey said Ross did not release test scores of its students.

Relating how one high school senior had recreated DaVinci's models of airplanes, Gerald Curatola said, "I wish we could see some more in the paper about what these students do."

The Ross School is currently looking for four teachers for the 2004-2005 school year: A cultural history teacher, an instrumental music teacher, a part-time vocational graphic and web design instructor and a Spanish teacher.

review: king lear

By Dan Rattiner

We went to see Shakespeare's King Lear at the Lincoln Center Theatre last Wednesday night. It has a cast of about forty people, most of whom die horrible deaths, and it goes on and on for nearly four hours.

In the opening scene, we meet King Lear, a very elderly man, sort of a lion in winter now long in the tooth, who is about to announce that he is dividing up his kingdom among his three children, all of whom are daughters. Lear's memory is pretty shot and he has a bit of palsy, so he seems pretty resigned to the fact that his reign is at an end and he ought to turn things over to the next generation. In fact, he is looking forward to his retirement. His plan is, it seems, to go and visit his daughters and watch from the sidelines as his family grows. As he is about to give everything away, playfully, he asks each of his daughters to make a speech telling him how much she loves him. He might give one of them a bigger piece of the kingdom.

Before it is over, one of his daughters stabs herself, another dies from poison and the third is hung. As for Lear, he has a heart attack, goes mad and dies sprawled across his youngest daughter's body, stricken with grief.

Walking out of the theatre, I frankly thought that all of this carnage could have been avoided. In fact, the whole play would be unnecessary if only Lear had not wanted to divide his kingdom into three parts. What he should have done was choose one of his daughters and her husband to give the kingdom to, then look at everybody and say, "That's what I think is best. Deal with it." Things being what they were in sixteenth century England, he might have chosen the daughter with the husband who was the strongest, bravest and most courageous. There WAS such a man amongst them. This was the Duke of Cornwall, who was married to Regan. The second daughter was married to the Duke of Albany, who was a real wuss. And the third daughter, the most beautiful of them, Cordelia, was engaged to be married to a French Count. He was nice enough, but as a foreigner would not be a good idea for an English kingdom.

Because of what Lear did, though, the whole first act is taken up with family squabbling among the daughters and their husbands. It seems a sort of normal family, what with all the different personalities and intrigues. There's a lot of jealousy in the family. And King Lear doesn't help because as he visits first one daughter and then the next, he brings an entourage of a hundred knights with him, who make a huge mess in each palace, trying the patience of his daughters and their servants. By the end of the first act, Lear has been turned away for bad behavior by each of them, except by his youngest daughter Cordelia who has, in fact, been turned out by King Lear himself for what he perceives is her bad behavior. So he can't go there, either.

Indeed, the family squabbles of this first act might well have been mended, I thought, as families often resign themselves to having to live together, except that there is Edmund, the illegitimate son of the Duke of Gloucester. In the first act, he forges letters to different people in the play, making these letters appear to come from somebody else, and thus, inflames the recipients to consider striking out against each other. At the beginning of the second act, this causes the whole thing to tip over into a high stakes political fight for the Kingdom that includes war, murder, backstabbing (literally) and even the ripping out of somebody's eyes onstage. (The victim, mercifully, is faced upstage.)

Christopher Plummer makes a wonderful Lear. The director, Jonathan Miller, keeps everything moving smartly along, and the thunder and lightning and falling rain while King Lear, half mad, lumbers around on the heath with a few hangers on, is excellently crafted.

I did think that if they had caught Edmund earlier, maybe toward the end of the first act, the situation still might have been saved. The ending might have been a nice family scene in front of a living room fire, with the servants running about, the dogs snoring by the grate and Lear padding in and out in slippers. All this sturm und drang for nothing.

Honestly, I don't think this is one of Shakespeare's best.

Who's Here

Sheldon Harnick Lyricist

By Janet Flora

How do you take Fiddler on the Roof, now in its fourth revival on Broadway, and make it modern while keeping the integrity of the show intact? Well, one way is to get the originators: lyricist Sheldon Harnick, composer Jerry Bock and writer Joe Stein back together — plus, throw in a new director — and let the collaboration begin.

The result, according to Harnick, is that while the show may have had additional reproductions on Broadway (1976, 1981, 1990) since its September 22, 1964 opening at the Imperial Theater, "This is the first time," he says, "that it has really been recreated. Because this is the first time there is something new — in and about the show."

What's new began with rekindling old partnerships. Harnick and Jerry Bock worked as a team for 13 years. In addition to Fiddler (for which they won a Tony) some of their most memorable hits include: Fiorello!, She Loves Me and The Rothschilds, which was their last collaboration, until this revival 30 years later. Harnick says, "What was strange about working with Jerry again is that after all these years it wasn't strange. We just picked up where we left off."

With David Leveaux as director, the team agreed that the musical needed to have a fresh look.

Harnick says, "It did feel a little frightening to tamper with the tradition of a 40- year-old show. This is the first time there has not been a house on stage. There is a roof, but no house." But ultimately, Harnick loves the result. "It's the same show, the same book, but it looks totally different, it's fluid and cinematic. And Alfred Molina is wonderful and brings a freshness to Tevye. In fact," he continues, "I became friends with Bel Kaufman, the granddaughter of Sholom Alchichem (who wrote the stories Fiddler is based on) and when she saw the show she told me Molina was the most believable Tevye yet."

While all the other music in the show remains the same, Harnick and Bock [along with input from Stein] wrote a new song for Yenta the matchmaker called "Topsy-Turvy," which replaces the song "The Rumor."

It's with thoughtfulness that Harnick approaches all his work. "I have to work from inside the character to explore what the character would feel, and what those feelings would lead to, and how that would be expressed." In order to accomplish this, Harnick says, "I have to find something in that character I can identify with, and then I need to think how that part of me would respond."

This thoughtfulness is not confined to lyrics.

Harnick composes music and has written the book, music and lyrics, for Dragons, which is based on a Russian play. The show recently played in a 90-seat house in New Jersey called The Luna Stage for seven weeks and received winning reviews.

"I fell in love with this place. I never had a good sense of direction, but when I came here I felt immediately oriented."

It makes sense that Harnick would write lyrics, stories and music, considering how he grew up. Born in Chicago in 1924, his mother was a poet, who celebrated every birthday, and every occasion, with a poem. He was playing violin by age eight, and attended Northwestern University before moving to New York in the 1950s, where he started out as a composer and a lyricist.

Harnick found his way to East Hampton in 1966, and, while working on The Apple Tree, soon became a permanent part-timer. "I fell in love with this place. I never had a good sense of direction, but when I came here I felt immediately oriented."

And early on a Saturday morning in March, Harnick and Margery, his wife (of 38 years), a painter and sculptor, look comfortable and oriented in the house they have lived in since 1968. Margery has her art studio in the house, and the house is full of her large, pastel paintings. She is represented by Arlene Bujese, in East Hampton. And Harnick looks not only comfortable, but content, at his piano with framed posters of his award-winning shows. Directly over the piano is an original illustration of Harnick by Al Hirschfeld. Harnick says, "I find I get more work done out here, because I'm less distracted and I get fewer phone calls." And while he admits to being a tiny bit less than disciplined, he says, "The best time for me to work is between 2-6 p.m., after I get my chores done. Except when I'm involved in something, and then I can work later, and if I'm really lucky that wonderful thing happens and you wake up with a problem solved."

If all that were not enough to make the East End feel like home, his son, Matt, who holds a degree in biology, is manager of Wild Bird Crossing in Bridgehampton. And his friend and collaborator, Joe Stein, is also an East Hampton resident. The Harnicks see Stein and his wife regularly, in New York and out here.

Just as Harnick splits his time between New York and East Hampton, he splits the time he collaborates with different composers. "I started out as a composer/lyricist and when I met Jerry Bock I was happy to let him write the music, but since then almost inadvertently I got into the business of writing books." While Harnick has not written an original book, he has done three adaptations: A Christmas Carol, It's a Wonderful Life, with composer Joe Raposo, and of course, Dragons.

Harnick talks about the collaborative process a bit like a dance between partners, where sometimes it seems you lead and other times you follow. "When Jerry and I started to collaborate it took us about a year to learn how to work together. The difficulty is when two sensitive people work together, you have to learn to take criticism professionally, not personally."

Certainly Harnick and Bock have achieved the balance. But now Harnick is collaborating with several different composers. He has worked, and continues to work, with Michel Legrand and Cy Coleman and he is working on a musical with composer James Vacq for the first time.

"Now," he says, "I think the process of learning to work with someone is smoother, mostly because I have a backlog of success and I have learned to trust myself more. Although," he adds, "I think it's a rare writer who has such confidence that he says I've written this and it's wonderful. At some point you have to show it to someone and get input." Harnick tells a wonderful story about the late Richard Rodgers when they worked together on Rex. "I had to give him a lyric and I kept revising and revising, and finally I realized it wasn't getting better is was just getting different. I thought, 'He is going to grade me and I'm going to get an 'F.'"

Rodgers didn't fail Harnick, and Harnick didn't fail Rodgers. In fact, after Rodgers had the lyric for a few days, he wrote the most beautiful music to go with it. And Rodgers said to Harnick, "You know, before I got ready to play this for you, my wife said, 'I hope he likes it.'"

Harnick wrote all the lyrics for Rex before Rodgers wrote the music. While Harnick prefers to have the music first, he can work either way. He says, "Music can inspire you and suggest lyrics you wouldn't have thought of. But there are times that you don't want to be constrained by the music, and you need the freedom to explore." In all the years Harnick and Bock worked together, it ended up that about half the time the lyrics came first and half the time the music came first.

"To be a successful lyricist," Harnick says, "whether in the theater, or in pop music, you must have certain skills. You must have a feeling for words and sounds, and have a feeling for how the words fit the music. I don't think these are skills I acquired. I sharpened them. But I did not acquire them; I was blessed with them."

And so are all those who have been listening to those words and sounds for decades, and the best part is — there is more to come. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #290
Coffee Breaks and Wind Breaks

Meteorologists always include wind speed in their reports, especially in March, but I never quite get the difference between a 20 mph gust or a 40 mph gust, and all gradations therein. So I have invented a better system to inform the public of how bad the wind really is.

Ghost Riders in the Sky Alert: This is a mild but persevering wind that you observe when you open your car door and any loose, empty IGA bags that you were keeping in the car for garbage sail out of the car, up and away before you can grab them. You will make two attempts to grab them and as you claw the air six inches above your head, the bags will billow with a full breath of wind and fly away looking like cute little clouds.

Coffee Cooler Warning: A little stronger than the Ghost Riders wind, the Coffee Cooler wind is strong and consistent. It can cool down a cup of McDonald's coffee to a drinkable temperature in 10 minutes instead of the usual 45 minutes.

Marilyn Monroe Alert: Wind gusts strong enough to blow your skirt up over your head and show everybody your business. It's a good idea on a Marilyn Monroe Alert day to wear attractive underwear. I like to put my phone number on my underwear on a Marilyn Monroe Alert day, just so ...:uh... so someone can return me home in case they find me.

Pizza Box Decapitation Warning: Pizza boxes, left innocently next to garbage cans, can become airborne and spin at 500 mph, a sufficient speed to take your head off! This is the reason we should break pizza boxes down. No one has done a study of death by pizza box yet...rumors are that Pizza Hut, Papa John, and Dominoes have banned together to cover up the hundreds of deaths each year. Fortunately this is not a problem on Shelter Island. Pizza boxes at the Recycle Center are gathered up and weighted down with a 20 pound ship's anchor, so they can't escape.

Half Can Alert: Empty or slightly full trash cans will roll downhill a quarter of a mile from point of origin. Your trash can lids will be retrievable after a fifteen minute search.

Full Trash Can Alert: Heavy trash cans will be knocked over and will distribute your garbage evenly across the lawns of the three neighbors to your right or left, depending on which way the wind is blowing plus the ratio of the downhill incline divided by the air velocity and gravitational pull of the moon at the time the garbage can falls over. Your trash can lids will be hopelessly lost. It is an acceptable practice to simply adopt any foreign lid that landed in your yard.

Toddler Alert: The level after the Full Trash Can Alert is the Toddler Alert. This is when the wind is strong enough to lift and relocate any toddler who is standing outside and holding an umbrella. There is a simple home test you can perform to check for this wind level. Duct tape an open umbrella to your toddler and send him or her outside. You can observe from the window. If the kid lifts and drops like a stone, it's not really a Toddler Alert level wind. However, if your toddler becomes airborne and disappears, it's definitely a very high wind and you might want to keep your other children inside for safety.

Double Laid Eggs Alert: This warning is rarely seen. The Double Laid Eggs Alert is posted around Shelter Island by the people who sell eggs on the roadside. The sellers post the picture of a very surprised chicken by the egg box. This warning is posted when the wind is so severe that Island chickens are laying the same eggs twice.

Blind Faith Warning: This is the most severe wind warning of all. When the winds are so strong and the seas are whipped up to match, the ferries post a picture of Christopher Columbus, up by the ramp. The ferry worker gives you a prayer card instead of a ticket. It means they will aim for their destination, but will accept a landing whereever they can find one. You could land in Montauk, Orient Point, or any points in between. Do not complain. If you land, get out and kiss the ground!

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS
THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL
Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.
Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring 2004
April 3rd 1 p.m.
Coyote Beach – A short 20 minute movie filmed at Napeaque by filmmaker Markus Griesshammer.
The 21st Century Filmmaker Award for Best American Short at the 9th Avignon – New York Film Festival 2003. The film had a number of festival showings including the 11th Annual Hampton International Film Festival 2003.
A risqué modern humorous and at times reflective take on the eternal battle of the sexes set in the sand dunes of Long Island. Coyote Beach is a fresh look at the age-old question that plagues every couple, namely who wears the pants in the family. The dynamics of power between the protagonists seem to shift with the tide as they – every generation before them – fight their own version of the battle of the sexes.
Immediately following the short film
Death Trap (1982)
Michael Caine, Dyan Cannon and Christopher Reeve.
A fiendishly funny film version of Ira Levin's Broadway hit starring Michael Caine as the blocked writer, Dyan Cannon as his loving, naive wife and Christopher Reeve as a former student who's written a play so flawless "even a gifted director couldn't ruin it."
April 10th 1 p.m.
Wall Street (1987)
Starring: Michael Douglas, Charlie Sheen
Oliver Stone's 1987 tale of greed has brokerage wheeler and dealer Charlie Sheen selling his soul to the streets highest roller, Michael Douglas in an Oscar winning performance.
April 17th 1 p.m.
Something's Gotta Give (2003)
Jack Nicholson, Diane Keaton
A young man (Keanu Reeves) plays a doctor caring for a man (Nicholson), who suffers a heart attack at the house of his young girlfriend's mother (Keaton). While there, the elder man falls in love with the mom (Keaton). The doctor also finds he has an attraction to her, despite their age difference.

Southampton's Paris Hilton will be off to Australia to be directed by Jaume Collet-Serra in a remake of the 1953 horror movie, House of Wax. Chad Michael Murray and Elisha Cuthbert will star in the flick to be released in October by Dark Castle Entertainment for Warner Brothers/Village Roadshow. The other road show is the second season of The Simple Life that puts Paris and Nicole Richie on a trip through the countryside in a pink pick up, staying with different families along the way. Tough rules: no cell phones, manicurists or clubs.

Ms. Hilton also won over competitors Cameron Douglas, Rosanna Arquette and Adrien Brody at the DanceStar Awards in Miami when she was named Best Celebrity DJ. Festivities continued at Mansion for her new hit single, sponsored by Sirius Radio, with JC Chasez and Nick Carter.

The Gayle Wilson Gallery will present the creations of Amy Zerner of East Hampton in May. Ms. Zerner's ready to wear collection will be presented this spring, in addition to her renowned one-of-a-kind-designs. The artist and her husband, Monte Farber, have three new publications in the works, too. A new tarot deck for love and relationships (St. Martins Press) will feature Ms. Zerner's exquisite artwork. Grace and gentleness is the theme for a new book, Fairies (Harper Collins). Cards for breathing exercises will be published by Chronicle Books for distribution in a variety of locations.

Wilbur Ross of Southampton was the enthusiastically received featured speaker at a business conference, Roundup, in Dallas last week, with Zale and American Airlines execs. Mr. Ross discussed "The Distressed Debt Landscape Today" at Turnaround Management Association's Spring Conference.

Peter Jennings of Bridgehampton was honored with Tom Brokaw and Dan Rather at the Waldorf-Astoria last Tuesday at the black tie Gold Medal Awards from the International Radio and Television Society Foundation.

OneWorld magazine, put out by East Hampton's Russell Simmons, is on a budgetary hiatus after nine years on the stands. The hip-hop mag closed temporarily following publisher John Pasmore's departure.

Ian Holm joined Kate Capshaw and Steven Spielberg of East Hampton where they all enjoyed Tony winner Betty Buckley's performance, Portraits, at the Café Carlyle in Manhattan. The works of American songwriters are featured, with Billy Joel and Montauk's Paul Simon included.

Stylish Kathy Hilton of Southampton will appear in To the Hilt for Real Life with Mary Amoroso on Comcast. Paris and Nicky's Mom has two segments in the series to be aired this May. But it's not exactly "Move over, Martha," it's more "The Haute Life."

We're looking forward to catching up with Edie Falco in Montauk this summer. The Sopranos star (Carmela) appeared at Radio City Music Hall for HBO's fifth season premiere with (Big Pussy) Vincent Pastore, (Paulie Walnut) Tony Sirico, Marianne Leone and her husband, Oscar winner Chris Cooper, and James Gandolfini with Lora Somoza. It takes two hours for Ms. Falco in make up, manicure, wardrobe and jewelry to become Carmela. Her character will live separately from her husband this season, in an empty nest with her daughter, Meadow, played by Jamie-Lynn Sigler DeSacalla, studying at Columbia.

HOPING FOR A HOT AND SUNNY SUMMER?

(Be careful what you wish for!)

Here's to a glorious summer, but the hotter and sunnier it is, the more you'll need the protection of Sunesta Awnings from East End Awnings. Our awnings are strong, water-repellant and available in over 200 beautiful colors and patterns. Sunesta awnings have no ugly confining braces or upright poles and the retract easily, either manually or with the push of a button with an optional motor.

They'll shield you from the brutal sun, provide soothing, sooling shade and beautify your home, all at the same time. (And maybe prevent a few wrinkles, too.) We hope you get exactly the weather you wish for this summer... just be careful!

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

The excerpt below is from Theodore Roosevelt's book, The Rough Riders, written by him in 1899. At the time, he was running for Vice President of The United States. He was writing about his voyage by troop ship from Cuba to Montauk at the conclusion of the Spanish-American War. He had commanded the Rough Riders during that war. This chapter of the book can be viewed at Bartleby.com / 51 / 6.html.

The Rough Riders

By Theodore Roosevelt

The Return Home

On the eve of leaving Santiago I had received from Mr. Laffan of the Sun, a cable with the single word "Peace," and we speculated much on this, as the clumsy transport steamed slowly northward across the trade wind and then into the Gulf Stream. At last we sighted the low, sandy bluffs of the Long Island coast, and late on the afternoon of the 14th we steamed through the still waters of the Sound and cast anchor off Montauk. A gun-boat of the Mosquito fleet came out to greet us and to inform us that peace negotiations had begun.

Next morning we were marched on shore. Many of the men were very sick indeed. Of the three or four who had been closest to me among the enlisted men, Color-Sergeant Wright was the only one in good health. Henry Bardshar was a wreck, literally at death's door. I was myself in first-class health, all the better for having lost twenty pounds. Faithful Marshall, my colored body-servant, was so sick as to be nearly helpless.

Bob Wrenn nearly died. He had joined us very late and we could not get him a Krag carbine; so I had given him my Winchester, which carried the government cartridge; and when he was mustered out he carried it home in triumph, to the envy of his fellows, who themselves had to surrender their beloved rifles.

For the first few days there was great confusion and some want even after we got to Montauk. The men in hospitals suffered from lack of almost everything, even cots. But after these few days we were very well cared for and had abundance of all we needed, except that on several occasions there was a shortage of food for the horses, which I should have regarded as even more serious than a shortage for the men, had it not been that we were about to be disbanded. The men lived high, with milk, eggs, oranges, and any amount of tobacco, the lack of which during portions of the Cuban campaign had been felt as seriously as any lack of food. One of the distressing features of the malarial fever which had been ravaging the troops was that it was recurrent and persistent. Some of my men died after reaching home, and many were very sick. We owed much to the kindness not only of the New York hospitals and the Red Cross and kindred societies, but of individuals, notably Mr. Bayard Cutting and Mrs. Armitage, who took many of our men to their beautiful Long Island homes.

On the whole, however, the month we spent at Montauk before we disbanded was very pleasant. It was good to meet the rest of the regiment. They all felt dreadfully at not having been in Cuba. It was a sore trial to men who had given up much to go to the war, and who rebelled at nothing in the way of hardship or suffering, but who did bitterly feel the fact that their sacrifices seemed to have been useless. Of course those who stayed had done their duty precisely as did those who went, for the question of glory was not to be considered in comparison to the faithful performance of whatever was ordered; and no distinction of any kind was allowed in the regiment between those whose good fortune it had been to go and those whose harder fate it had been to remain. Nevertheless the latter could not be entirely comforted.

GUILD HALL AWARDS GALA

Guild Hall held the 19th Annual Academy of the Arts Awards Gala with a glittering black tie dinner at Rainbow and Stars high above Rockefeller Center in New York this past Monday. The lifetime achievement award winners were Alec Baldwin (Performing Arts), Ben Bradlee (Literary Arts), Jack Youngerman (Visual Arts), and Mort Zuckerman (Special Lifetime Achievement). A host of celebrities including Nora Ephron, Alan Alda, Eli Wallach and Tony Walton showed up to assist Guild Hall s Executive Director Ruth Applehof in honoring these worthy recipients. As usual the evening was a highlight of the Guild Hall Season. Congratulations and Bravo to all the recipients, but especially to Guild Hall for nurturing the artistic vision in East Hampton. Guild Hall opened its doors in 1931 and was the first center in America to combine a theatre, museum and community meeting place under one roof.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

East Hampton Pharmacy is sitting pretty at 106 North Main Street (perpendicular to Cedar Street) in East Hampton. Open since March 12, this new and delightful store has much to offer in pharmaceuticals and more. Ready and willing to serve you, owner,Frank Calvo, R.ph., has worked in almost every aspect of pharmacy care including hospital, retail, homecare, managed-care and mail order. One of the services he has added is a state-of-the-art computer system. The prescription processing computer can be accessed by physicians as well as patients via their home or office computer.

East Hampton Pharmacy is a full service apothecary pharmacy that accepts most insurance and offers very competitive pricing. The pharmacy carries name brand vitamin lines and a wide variety of over-the-counter medications and health and beauty aids and also offers meds for children and pets.

The front end of the store is quite unique. In trying to maintain an old time apothecary look, they have installed a soda fountain that will soon be in operation, serving ice cream and gelato products as well as packaged and penny candy, homemade chocolates, coffee, teas and biscotti. There are also fragrances, bath and body products, candles and wonderful gift items to choose from. For further information you can call 631-324-3887.

Joy's Corner Gallery and Studio is a 1,100 square foot art gallery located at 22 East Main Street in the heart of Patchogue, surrounded by restaurants, stores and the Patchogue Theatre for the Performing Arts. The Corner Gallery opened its doors in September of 2003 and features the talents of local artists. Quality crafts include stained glass, hand-designed mirrors, hand-painted furniture, carved animal figures, painted glass and many other fine hand-crafted items. Custom orders are welcome. The gallery specialty is decorative painted furniture and wood designs.

"Reflections" by Joyce Soper-Martucci

Owner Joyce Soper-Martucci's new and exciting business represents over thirty artists' works, their pieces created from oils, acrylic, watercolors, batiks, Giclee prints, sculptures, photography and museum-quality crafts. A collection of original artistic creations encompasses one wall and is completely dedicated to the students of Briarcliffe College, where they have donated their time hand-painting individual ceiling tiles with things like dragons, fairies, butterflies and abstracts. Joy tries to keep the students involved in lots of different events at the gallery that involve art. Artists who want their works considered can call Joyce to set up an appointment at 631-289-0137. The Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Elsa's Ark Thrift Shop, located at 70 Main Street in Southampton, is a new shop that will be opening its doors on Thursday, April 1st. Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Thursday

Thursday night is a pretty cool night, when you are away at school. For some reason, Thursday is a very normal night to go out to a night club or a bar with a group of friends when you are in college. The entire Boston college scene does this. For the most part, I do not really like to go out on Thursday night, because on Fridays I have classes, and it is almost impossible to get out of bed on a Friday morning after going out with friends on a Thursday night.

So, I went out on Thursday night.

My roommates and I had a little powwow in the kitchen. One wanted to go to a club, one wanted to go to a bar. We were debating with ourselves. Personally, I did not really care either way, but my roommates were torn. The conversation went as follows. I didn't speak a word.

"We should go to a bar, man, I don't feel like getting all dressed up."

"No, I'm telling you, man, we should go to this club, there are going to be girls there."

"There will be girls at the bar."

"Yeah, but Lauren told me that her and her sorority are going to a club."

"Sorority?"

"Sorority, dude."

"All right, give me a minute to put a dress shirt on."

Well, that pretty much solved the whole club/bar issue. I didn't really care either way. For some reason, my roommates were both under the impression that if a sorority was there, it would mean that we would meet millions of girls.

Even though there was about a one in twenty shot that I would have a good time going to a night club, I was still really excited. We got dressed, went outside and hailed a Boston cabby.

I don't know what it is that makes going out to a nightclub fun. You spend tons of money, feel like an idiot dancing and then go home all sweaty. I think that it is the story the next day that makes a nightclub fun. When people ask you what you did last night, you can say, "Oh man, we went out to this nightclub called Silk."

I think night club names are funny. They almost never make sense. I can just see the guys that are starting the club thinking beforehand what they are going to call it. It is always a sexy name, usually derived from a type of cloth (silk, velvet, lace, plaid, felt). Other times, it is named after a drink, (vodka, champagne, martinis, cosmopolitan). Then, finally, it is just a weird word that nobody knows, but sounds kind of cool (Avalon, Mantra, Solas).

There was a line for practically a mile outside this place. Hundreds of people were standing outside in the freezing cold. There were two or three bouncers at the doors, and they were not letting anyone in.

I expressed to my roommates that I really did not think that this was a good idea. The line was obviously too long. They didn't care. We got on line and waited and waited and waited.

After an hour of waiting, we got to the front of the line. It was one a.m. The bouncer frisked me, asked for my ID, and forced me to pay twenty dollars just to get inside. The clubs close at two in the morning in Boston. I just paid twenty dollars to hang out in a club for an hour. GAHHHHH!

I walked inside, getting over the twenty dollars, feeling accomplished. I was expecting heaven inside. I walked up a flight of stairs. There were maybe five people there. No sorority.

Clubs are rough, man. You pretend to have a good time, but you really don't. For the most part, I feel kind of self conscious in them. I bought one drink and left early, leaving my friends behind.

I got home at two in the morning, looking to go to sleep. My cell phone rang. "Why did you leave, dude?" I could hear the music in the background.

"I didn't really feel like being there."

"Oh man, you suck. It is so awesome here!"

My roommates will do this to make me feel guilty for leaving, even though I can picture them in my mind standing around spending eight bucks for a drink. I felt like a loser, got over it quick, however, and made myself a sandwich.

I signed on the Internet to CNN.com and found out that there was the terrorist attack in Spain. I had a friend whose girlfriend was there for her spring break. I called him, he told me that he had not heard about it.

We found out the next day she was fine. I'm telling you, man, I am so lucky to have the things that I have, and the problems that I think I have. We all are. I just can't believe that this kind of thing has happened again. I just don't get it.

When In Manhattan...

Pulitzer-Winning Photojournalism by Vincent Leforet

A lot of crazy things have happened in New York over the last three years. The terrorist attacks, the blackout, blizzards, and the Yanks losing the World Series twice (boohoo) are some not so fun examples, but like all things, there is balance in the world and Manhattan remains its beautiful charming self. In the spring of 2000, before the world went haywire, Vincent Laforet dropped his job as website photo-guy at nytimes.com, for a position as a staff photographer at The New York Times. In the years that followed, he has had ample subject matter to work with. Laforet also managed to find time for shooting artful photographs that don't need any journalistic context. Some, in fact, are composed like paintings, and although they often have it, need no subject recognition whatsoever. Laforet's work is so good that he won a Pulitzer Prize for feature photography in 2002 for pictures taken in Pakistan and Afghanistan post-9/11. Right now, The French Institute Alliance Francaise is exhibiting a collection of Vincent Laforet's work, called Perspectives.

"EMPIRE STATE" Deke Johnson, left, and Tom Silliman worked 1,385 feet above street level to repair the electrical connections of an FM antenna atop the Empire State Building. Below them, ant-sized people on the observation deck imagined that they were the ones at the top of the world. 1/19/01 – New York, New York Perspectives features close to 40 prints culled from the photographer's vast portfolio. The pieces are broken into four groups. He has chosen to show his aerials, sports photographs, shots from aboard the aircraft carrier Lincoln before the recent Iraqi war, and pictures from his visit to Pakistan before the war in Afghanistan. The work from the Lincoln and Pakistan are meaningful to Leforet as they show "the wide range of war." He explained that his experience aboard the Lincoln gave him a new perspective on what war means, and what is at stake. While the 5,500 men and women were safe from immediate harm on the ship, they had ample time to dwell on why they were there, what was at stake, and the morbid possibilities. Possibilities not necessarily at the forefront of the minds of those on the front lines forced to go mechanically about their duties.

Mr. Laforet felt that the small villages of Pakistan correlated with the ship in that they, too, were on the periphery of a pot about to boil. Refugees were pouring in from Afghanistan, people were protesting, and things seemed on the verge of chaos. The images from Pakistan include those of protest, as well as refugees and the genuinely downtrodden, seen in "Bus Stop," and "Opium Smoker," which captures an addict smoking his pipe before a headstone in a Quetta cemetery in late September, 2001.

The Lincoln series is a bit more of what you might expect, with pictures of jets and soldiers in various stages of preparation, from shining boots to gathering for orders. One standout is "Steel Beach," where men lounge in an inflatable pool complete with beach ball, alongside their F-14 Tomcats on the carrier deck.

The sports photos in the show are well executed, but what stands out most are a number of shots Laforet calls "aerials." It is clear that he has a certain passion for these as seen by the lengths he has gone to achieve them. It was shocking to find out that his vertigo-inducing photo "Empire State," taken from above two men fixing electrical connections on antennae atop the needle of the Empire State building, was not taken from a helicopter. Laforet actually climbed up there with them to get the shot at 1,385 feet above street level. If you look at the picture, you'll understand how extreme this is. Other prints were taken during his helicopter assignments to shoot existing recreational areas and land slated for new ones. He managed to get his last ten minutes in the air free to express his artistic side, discovering a side of the city most of us, entrenched, never see. The results are sometimes beautifully rendered images of landmarks and skylines, but far more exciting are Laforet's unexpected gems that border on painterly. He has actually had some of these sophisticated images not connected to any specific news, chosen for the cover of The Times, and it is a fantastic showing of art for art's sake. What's more, the work is a reaffirmation that life goes on, and New York is full of it.

–Oliver Peterson

Vincent Leforet's "Perspectives" opened March 16th and will run through March 31st. Work is on view in the Gallery Mon-Fri, 10a.m.-8p.m. and Sat, 10a.m.-5p.m., and the Library Mon-Thurs, 11a.m.-8p.m., and Sat 11a.m.-1: 30p.m. The French Institute Alliance Francaise is located at 22 East 60th Street in Manhattan.

I'm happy to let you know about the sales and deals for this week. It's time to get going and get Tino to the groomer. Donna is now at the Dapper Dog at the Bridghampton Commons on Fridays.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Fancy This

Spring has sprung at A Little of What You Fancy on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. In their twenty-fourth year, Fancy has just received the first shipment of Kerry Cassill clothing and home textiles soon to be featured in Elle Décor. In fact, A Little of What You Fancy has just sent out napkins in Cassill's polka dot, striped and floral paisley Indian cotton prints to be photographed for the article. Stop in, as the stock is limited. Another clothing line introduced to the Hamptons from sunny California is by the Hollywood designer Jane Brooke who dresses celebrities like Melanie Griffith. The shop still carries the complete range of Kiehl's products including the newest Crème de Corp. And...with Easter on its way don't forget to pick up a dark chocolate bunny from Godiva at the old fashioned candy counter. A one-stop shop, stop in, you will be glad you did.

Traveling takes you on a journey you have never been on before. Even here in Miami Beach, where we have visited several times, we opted for a brief stay in Key West, where quaint, colorful Victorian homes dot the narrow side streets. Duval Street, a main thoroughfare, is like one big party after-hours with music blaring from the local pubs, open-air restaurants and shops teeming with tourists. Beautiful waters surround Key West for great fishing on the flats and off shore, diving and snorkeling on the barrier reef and for sailing into the famous sunsets.

A one-day trip to Vizcaya in Coconut Grove – no passport required – transported us from the New World to the Old. That's the magic of Vizcaya. Built by American industrialist James Deering in the style of an Italian Renaissance villa, it boasts antiquity of major proportions and a world-class decorative arts collection. Overlooking beautiful Biscayne Bay, Vizcaya maintains the spirit of a bygone era.

Moving along to a simpler setting we always try to include a visit to Opa's Taverna, a Greek restaurant in Hollywood, Florida. The restaurant, open to the Intercoastal, can be reached by car or boat. It is an authentic re-creation of a Taverna on a Greek island. A DJ offers traditional Greek music, a beautiful young belly dancer lures patrons to get up on the tables and dance with her – even the waiters get up on tables. This is a high-energy place where dancers feel free to express themselves. Word of advice: don't come if you're looking for quiet conversation. But do come for the food. It is excellent.

Chickpea, garlic and olive oil mash, served in a wooden mortar and pestle with crusty bread, await you at your table. Mezze, Greek appetizers, are the way to go. Their Greek salad, chock full of vegetables with superb feta and tangy lemony dressing, dishes of roasted sweet peppers, stuffed grape leaves and shrimp in a citrus and tomato compote can be an entire meal. Succulent grilled lamb chops, steaks and seafood, and crusty lemony potatoes, all prepared in an open wood-fire grill, are standouts. Put Zorba the Greek into your CD player, prepare the two recipes below and you, too, will be dancing on the table.

OPA'S GREEK SALAD

This is an adaptation of a delicious Greek Salad from Opa's Taverna, a Greek restaurant in Hollywood, Florida. Prep all the ingredients ahead, and toss with the dressing, just before serving.

Serves 6

1 large red onion, sliced paper thin
1 large red pepper, rinsed, de-seeded, cored and cut into thin strips
2 cucumbers peeled, halved, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch slices
3 large ripe tomatoes cut into wedges
3-4 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
4-5 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
10-12 black Greek olives
1/2 pound feta cheese, cut into cubes

1. Place onion slices in a bowl and cover with fresh tap water. Let soak for 15 minutes to reduce strong flavors. Drain, place in a clean kitchen towel and squeeze dry. Transfer to a large mixing bowl.

2. Add prepared cucumbers, pepper slices, tomato wedges and parsley to onions. Season with oregano, salt and pepper to taste, dress with lemon juice and olive oil, toss gently to mix and transfer to a serving platter. Scatter the olives and cubes of feta cheese over the top and serve with crusty bread. OPA!

GARIDES ME FETA

(Shrimp with Feta cheese)

This Greek classic is adapted from Opa's Taverna in Hollywood , Florida

Serves 6

2 pounds large shrimp, shelled and deveined
2 shallots, minced
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped or 1 cup canned tomatoes
Juice of 1/2 lemon
Juice of 1 orange
1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf parsley
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1/2 cup dry white wine
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/2 pound feta cheese
Parsley leaves for garnish, optional

1. Rinse the shrimp and drain on paper towels.

2. Heat oil in a large skillet over medium heat and sauté the shallots for about 1 minute until tender. Add the garlic and sauté for another 30-40 seconds. Add the tomatoes, lemon and orange juice, parsley, wine and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer for 20-25 minutes. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and remove from heat. Can be prepared ahead to this point.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

3. When ready to serve, divide the sauce into 6 individual ovenproof dishes. Divide the shrimp equally in each dish and crumble feta cheese over the shrimp. Place the dishes on a cookie sheet and bake for 5-6 minutes or until shrimp are cooked and cheese is melted. Garnish with fresh parsley if desired and serve hot.

Dining In The Hamptons

Traditional Irish Cooking

It's time for corned beef cabbage and Irish Soda Bread. That's right, it's St. Patrick's Day or for many "St. Patrick's week." The Irish, and "honorary Irish" love to celebrate this holiday to the maximum. Any excuse for a bit of Irish home cooking accompanied, perhaps, by a pint of Guinness makes for the perfect meal.

Since many of us will be celebrating with our friends or attending the St. Patrick's Day Parade on Wednesday, this weekend would be the perfect time to cook your family a wonderful traditional Irish meal.

According to the Best of Irish Traditional Cooking by Biddy White Lennon, the main foods of Irish tradition consist of: fish, shellfish, crustaceans and seaweed, milk, butter, cheese, grains, vegetables and fruits, meat and game, the potato, and alcoholic drinks. So, in honor of tradition, we're going to learn how to cook Corned Beef Cabbage and Irish Soda Bread. So let's get cooking!

Corned Beef Cabbage (from Best of Irish Traditional Cooking by Biddy White Lennon)

3 lb (approx) corned beef (silverside, topside, round, rump – or brisket, which is fattier)
1 onion
1 carrot
bouquet garni
2 cloves garlic
2 cups (small bottle) dry cider

Soak the meat overnight in several changes of water. Place all the ingredients in a large ovenproof pot with fresh water and cover. Bring to a boil, skimming all the while. Reduce heat to barely a simmer and cover tightly.

If you intend to eat the meat cold, as many Irish prefer, allow it to cool in the cooking water, then remove to a plate and press lightly, either in a meat press, or by covering with a weighed down plate.

Corned beef is usually served with boiled potatoes and, of course, cabbage. You can accompany the meat with a mustard sauce of your liking.

Nan's Irish Soda Bread

4 cups of all-purpose flour
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon of salt
3 3/4 tablespoons baking soda
1 teaspoon caraway seed
1 cup of seedless raisins
1 3/4 cup whole milk
1 egg

Mix and sift flour, salt, sugar, baking powder and baking soda. Soak raisins and seeds in 3/4 cup of milk.

Combine egg and 1 cup milk and whip with a fork. Stir milk and egg into mix until fully moistened.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

Bake in a 9 inch greased pan for 1 hour

Make a cross on top of batter before you put into the oven.

While still warm, wrap in a towel.

Now that you've prepared your entrees and dessert, let's talk about beer. When I think of Ireland, I think of beer and pubs. Whether it's Guinness or New York City's famous McSorley's Ale, there is nothing better than an ice-cold brew to wash down your meal. Although I prefer the lighter ale, many people enjoy the strong taste of dark ale as well.

I hope you all enjoyed your St. Patrick's Day tradition. Cheers! –Kelly Krieger

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

Continuing the tradition of affordable dining in the Hamptons set by the upcoming Hamptons Restaurant Week, Pacific East will continue to offer its year round three-course prix fixe for $19.99. The cash only prix fixe is available all night on Thursday and Friday, and on Sunday from 5:30 to 7:00pm. Additionally, a special selection of wines priced at $40.00 and under is also offered with the prix fixe. Pacific East offers a diverse menu of 5 to 8 items per course. The dishes on the prix fixe are the same dishes served on the regular menu – same size, same ingredients – just at a big savings. For details call Pacific East, located in Amagansett, at 267-7770.

Speaking of Hamptons Restaurant Week, it starts next Sunday March 28th and runs to Sunday April 4th. Stop into participating restaurants and get a three-course meal for $19.95, as well as deals on bottles of Long Island wine. Around thirty-five restaurants are now involved. Many lodging and retail businesses have also come on board offering discounts for that week. Log onto www.hamptonsrestaurantweek.com for a list of participants, as well as all the up-to-date info.

Southampton Inn and Castello di Borghese Winery are offering a dinner that pairs seven gourmet courses with Borghese wines, tomorrow night at the Inn at 7 p.m. The evening begins with a reception, followed by dinner prepared by Southampton Inn's Executive Chef Steven Biscari-Amaral. Vineyard owners Ann Marie and Marco Borghese will be on hand. The menu includes: crispy skin striped bass with gorgonzola polenta and rosemary oil served with an '01 Reserve Chardonnay; organic carrot risotto with foie gras and carrot top puree served with '01 Reserve Pinot Noir; roast parsnip pot sticker in a Long Island duck ragu with '00 Reserve Pinot Noir; and poached beef tenderloin with white truffle broth served with '00 Meritage. The dessert is Tuaca Semi Freddo with bittersweet espresso sauce, served with '02 Allegra Late Harvest Riesling. The dinner costs $85 per person plus tax and gratuity. Entertainment is provided by jazz instrumentalist Julie Bluestone's Laura Mann. For reservations call the Inn at 283-6500.

Serving only the finest Italian cuisine since 1932, Casa Basso in West Hampton offers al fresco waterfront dining every Tuesday through Sunday. On Friday and Saturday evenings, enjoy live music with Mike Ryan at the piano. On premises catering is also available for private parties of up to 300 guests. For more info or for reservations call 288-1841.

Bagels 'n Brunch in Speonk cooks up breakfast and lunch from 6 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Sundays 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Eat in or take out available, or have them cater your next home or office party. Call 325-0850 for further information.

Open every Friday and Saturday beginning at 3:30 p.m., The Blue Parrot offers all your favorite Mexican dishes, along with delicious margaritas. Located across from the movie theater and down the walk way, The Parrot has Karaoke on Friday nights starting at 9 p.m. and live music with "Rock Bottom" on Saturday nights. Call 324-3609 for take out or more info

With a breathtaking view of Fort Pond, East By Northeast in Montauk is open every Thursday through Sunday beginning at 5 p.m. Enjoy small plates, such as the filet mignon lettuce wraps, Asian barbecue tofu and Peking duck tacos, or large plates for sharing such as caramelized Chilean sea bass, pad Thai noodles and wok roasted sea scallops. Call 668-2872 or log on to www.harvest2000.com. E.N.E. also offers in-house catering for up to 220 people.

Taking a break from the net (Fox Sports Net, that is) Max Kellerman found time to munch on a shrimp and avocado salad at Babette's in East Hampton.

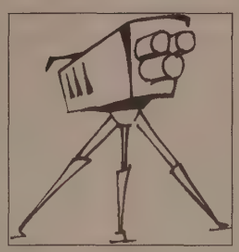
Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Starsksy & Hutch

I shudder to think of the number of sweet innocent souls who live terribly dangerous lives by playing Russian Roulette with their delicate mentalities. It is chancy simply to sit in front of a television screen, let alone spin the dial at random and hope for something not too injurious. A woman's bare breast doesn't particularly shake me up. One appeared last week at the Princess Diner in the flesh. The woman's l'il babe needed nourishment, just like mom. But, by golly, the cheesy shows and multitude of cheesy commercials (Kraft and Polly-O needn't panic) appear to need to shock to set their schlock apart from the other shock-schlock. I realize that some of these productions are as loved as mother's milk by many. Then, it follows, why not scoop up some of these and plump them up to oversized movie screens. After all, nostalgia is involved and so, why not a super-pooper-scooper pastiche of Starsky & Hutch, a detective buddy series that first splattered TV screens in 1975 with more violence than the boob tube had been digesting with Carnation evaporated milk. When the series ran its cranked-up macho course, its master and commander of TV series (not serious) producer, Aaron Spelling, made sure it ran and ran and re-ran on lesser re-run channels. If you're curious enough to see more of the same, abetted by foul language, you'll find that they haven't beaten enough of the dust out of the stained, old, tangerine colored shag carpeting. Ben Stiller as David Starsky and Owen Wilson as Ken Hutchinson, wearing their ever-popular genial chemistry and 70s retro-thrift store collectibles, generate as much déjà vu from their personal rapport as their clothing. Stiller's tantrums almost split his tight jeans or, is it too much pre-washing? His attempts at machismo are as unimpressive as his appearance in a Speedo bikini in Meet The Parents. I can't think that the TV Starsky, Paul Michael Glaser, gave his tumbling over car hoods as much "schlemiel" as Stiller does. Owen Wilson's stoner fuzziness gives the David Soul TV Hutch a bit more blasé, who-gives-a-damn cool, a good contrast to Stiller's out of his gourd frenzy. Funnily, I "dig" Snoop Dogg as Huggy Bear, a police informant, the most. His hustling, in cahoots with the law, takes charge of the era's essence and leaves Stiller and Wilson back in Zoolander country where they are more uncomfortably funny.



Satire is tough to pull off. This Old Frankenstein reconstruction of the casually brutal cop-show lives – but barely. It has trouble breathing, let alone laughing at the hair, clothing and speech style of the period. Yep, like the television series, it was all bad in the kooky sense, and so is the big screen movie. If one isn't superior to the other – who's laughing at whom and what?

Can you dig it?

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

GROUP SHOW "CONNECTS" AT GLENN HOROWITZ

While Glenn Horowitz's current show bills itself as featuring young, local artists (meaning "emerging") this is not the case. Most of the contributors are beyond the initiation stage and a few have had New York exhibitions. Their sophisticated use of materials also connotes experience.

There is another aspect that these artists share: thematic similarities, at least in the present presentation. It's doubtful if the artists were selected for this commonality; however, this critic sees "connections" rather than disparity, regardless of how subtle and indirect these bonds may appear.

Courtesy Glenn Horowitz

"Boys Lie" by Peter Dayton

For the most part, such similarities concern the employment of the line in various forms; ironically, these configurations create isolation, and "disconnection." Consider, for example, Peter Sabbeth's grid: geometric, monochromatic works which establish the show's pattern. While grids may be a derivative form practiced by people like Agnes Martin to perfection, Mr. Sabbeth's lack of context produces an intriguing alienation.

Matthew Satz's paintings are more colorful, but the "drips" also evoke isolation and more precisely, images of icicles floating in space. One endeavor, in fact, hangs from the ceiling, its fingerlike shape resembling frozen water.

Peter Dayton's laser works on canvas recall a post "ice age" map where continents were in the process of separating from each other after a big thaw. Even Mr. Dayton's pieces featuring flowers have a "floating" feeling, where the blossoms seem secluded. Somehow, his flowers remind one of Ross Bleckner's petals, but the latter's thematic thrust is altogether different.

Works by both Jill Musnicki and Jameson Ellis continue this "floating" sensation with creatures suspended in space, unconnected to a particular setting. Are Mr. Ellis' forms really turtles? It's hard to tell, but the idea is not delineation, but mood.

Although Nick Webber's figurative pieces represent a more realistic, less abstract view of reality, wherein his "characters" are somehow linked to each other through a narrative, there's still an isolating quality about them. The figures who are alone seem only connected to themselves and their own inner thoughts.

The show will be on view at East Hampton's Glenn Horowitz Bookseller until April 5.

Honoring the Artist: Peter von Artens

While it's unfortunate that Buenos Aires artist Peter von Artens is no longer living, we are lucky to have his work gracing the cover of Dan's Paper. Thus, the creator may be gone, but the art exists regardless.

Call it an obvious observation if you will, but the fact still remains: works of art often possess an eternal life, exerting an everlasting effect over those who experience their presence.

That said, we can also attest to the fact that Mr. von Artens' paintings have an omnipresence, too, but it's not a philosophical one. Rather, such pervasion concerns the inherent nature of his subject matter: simply put, Mr. von Artens' still lives of vibrant, colorful flowers. Yet, vibrancy and color are not the only aesthetic elements which give his work a life of their own.

It is also the artist's sense of composition; "vibrant," therefore, seems an appropriate description. According to one analysis, Mr. von Artens' arrangement of objects in space happens "from color to color through a smooth transition that is almost imperceptible because it rejects violent resistence." This examination goes on to explain "vibrations" as essential to such a process.

Reading a biography of Mr. von Artens also reveals some interesting information, namely that he is labeled a Postmodernist. What this suggests is that his style and / or themes are a hybrid form derived from opposing sources.

We can see this label's origin in one obvious way: Mr. von Artens has had a varied cultural background, and this contrast may have contributed to his Postmodern sensibility. For example, born in Argentina, he studied art in Santiago, Chile, at the Miguel Venegas Cifuentes Fine Art Atelier. In the late 1950s, he went to Madrid, Spain to learn art at the Royal Academy of San Fernando.

Mr. von Arten's international exposure continued beyond his school years, his exhibitions taking him to Bilboa, Caracas, San Salvador, back to his birthplace Buenos Aires, New York, Washington, D.C., and Miami where he resided until his death.

Mr. von Artens' Postmodern designation may also stem from his mixture of styles: Realism and Hyperrealism. Thus, his realism reveals nature as it exists both to the viewer and the painter: a representation of everything that can be seen and touched. Conversely, Hyperrealism implies details not experienced by the naked eye, a heightened sense of reality.

Regardless of the Postmodern label, however, Mr. von Artens' art, according to critics, is universal in nature, defying categories and assumptions.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Peter von Arten's work can be seen in the exhibit, "Arte de American Latina," at the Wally Findlay Gallery in Palm Beach, FL, opening March 27.

broadway theatre review: drowning crow... by gordin & christiano

Manhattan Theatre Club's latest endeavor at their handsome and recently renovated Biltmore Theatre on Broadway is an adaptation of Anton Chekhov's The Seagull, by the African-American actress/playwright Regina Taylor. Chekhov is undoubtedly one the finest and most revered of classical playwrights, right up there with Shakespeare. His atmospheric works set in Russia are richly etched stories with complex characters, which have long been favorites amongst actors and directors. Modern day adaptations of The Seagull, Uncle Vanya, and The Three Sisters have routinely appeared and have been set in many diverse places – even the beaches of the Hamptons.

Anthony Mackie and Aunjanue Ellis

Ms. Taylor has shifted the location to the Gullah Islands off the coast of modern-day South Carolina this time, where a family of African-American artists comes together. Her retelling is spiced with slang and hip-hop, along with references to Spike Lee and Angela Bassett, who replace Tolstoy and Duse. Instead of Chekhov's aging diva actress, Madame Arkandina, and her playwright son, Constantine, we now have Josephine Nicholas Ark (Alfre Woodard), the family matriarch, a classical actress, who is a former member of the Negro Ensemble Company, and C-Trip (Anthony Mackie), an avant-garde performance artist. Drowning Crow is indeed quite loyal to Chekhov, retaining the structure and often the actual lines from his Seagull. Now, however, the play begins with an enactment of C-Trip's suicide and is told from his perspective in flashback, removing much of the story's suspense and diluting the shock of the play's final moments. Featuring an entirely black cast and a renowned black director, Marion McClinton, the play is a surprisingly pale and spiritless interpretation in which the themes remain as undeveloped as the characters.

The evening is all the more disappointing since Drowning Crow has a talented cast of performers with impressive credentials. The potential of everyone involved, with one or two exceptions, is ultimately unrealized. The award winning Alfre Woodard has not been on stage for thirteen years, and the rust clearly shows in her lackluster interpretation of a grand dame of the American Theatre. She is no more theatrical than a frustrated suburban housewife, and she apparently has received little help from Ms. McClinton. Her relationship with her son, played by the talented Anthony Mackie, never catches fire. When she bandages his gunshot wounds, the scene begins well and you believe their relationship for a moment. This nice beginning ultimately goes astray, and the fire that might have burned bright turns into a spark which fails to ignite. The result by Mr. Mackie is, like the rest of his work here, an energetic, dazzling display, but an unfortunately wooden performance lacking any real depth of feeling. His presence is too strong and focused with none of the underlying angst. As his lost love Hannah, Aunjanue Ellis overplays dreadfully in the play's first act, but redeems herself somewhat as the weary, bitter Hannah in the final scene. The best realized and most authentic performance is by Peter Francis James as a TV writer and Josephine's jaded lover. Many of the supporting ensemble do well, notably Paul Butler and Stephen McKinley Henderson, but the acting, like a half empty glass of water, remains disappointingly unsatisfying.

With Chekhov, and any work drawn from his plays, you must begin on the inside and work your way out; otherwise what you get is merely a façade. The gloom of Russia hangs heavily over his work and is a necessary ingredient to any successful adaptation. In this case the restless, bored longing of those who have long since compromised themselves, brought out by the heat of the islands might have sufficed, but that, too, is missing. Drowning Crow, as written by Regina Taylor and directed by Marion McClinton, is a dull mess with several undeveloped themes and a hodgepodge of acting styles, which only occasionally gives any glimpse of the inner turmoil driving these people.

On the evening we attended, the entire row to the right of our orchestra seats was empty. Midway through the first half, I turned to see how many other seats remained empty and discovered two separate couples sleeping. Ah ha, I was not alone and I, too, could have easily dozed off.

Drowning Crow is playing on Broadway at MTC's Biltmore Theatre, 261 West 47th Street. For tickets call 212-239-6200 or www.telecharge.com, or the box office.

preview: visions of the east end

One might think that an event called Visions of the East End would be another great opportunity to enjoy a photography or painting exhibit by accomplished local artists. Happily, this time, one would be mistaken. Because these "Visions" are in fact not visual at all, but musical.

After decades of being spoiled by countless venues exhibiting works of renowned contemporary painters who made the East End their home or retreat, we now have the chance to hear from musical artists. In the second annual Visions of the East End concert on Friday, March 19th, at the Ross School, curated by artistic director Rosemary Reynolds-Sundet, five local composers (and one interloper) will present about a dozen short pieces.

"My goal was to support current music in our community," said Reynolds-Sundet, Dean of Performing Arts at Ross since 2000. "My hope is that it will become a tradition."

A tradition in the most untraditional sense, as it should be to showcase contemporary music. The eclectic program ranges from challenging modern idioms and neo-Romanticism to tributes to jazz and the American show tune. Like Richard Pearson Thomas's song, "The Portal" (from the musical-in-development "Golden Gate"), which evokes sheer Americana in the style of classic musicals like Man of La Mancha. Or Eleanor Cory's "Chasing Time," with a florid clarinet line some listeners describe as reminiscent of Benny Goodman licks.

The evening will begin with a buoyant, almost improvisational flute solo by Mark Applebaum, then wind its way though pieces that are in turn serious, whimsical, contemplative, dramatic and serene, by composers including Springs resident Stephen Dickman, Ross School's Director of Music Technology Sebastian Zubieta, and Suzanne Farrin.

According to Reynolds-Sundet, although it wasn't "preplanned," this year's Visions took on a unifying theme as an evening of intimate chamber works for piano, solo instrument and piano, and voice and piano. She approached the event almost as though crafting a piece of theater, with a clear dramatic arc. The goal was to create a cohesive, emotional experience for the audience. For the composers, like Eleanor Cory and Stephen Dickman, the concert has equally emotional overtones, but for different reasons.

"Having my music performed here means a lot to me," said Dickman. "It's great to be heard in your own community. It gives life to the composers living here, and shows that we have a function in the community."

Eleanor Cory, who spent summers here as a child and still maintains her family home in Amagansett, had another interpretation. "I have emotional feelings about the East End," she said. "I've been coming here since I was a little girl. To have my music performed locally is like coming here in a different way."

Cory, a widely performed and recorded composer who's the recipient of countless awards, also has a professional stake in being on the East End. "I write my best music here," she said.

What is it that makes the East End so inspiring? Ironically, while it was the visual stimulation that many painters found irresistible, composers are drawn here for the opposite reason: the lack of stimulation.

"It's the quiet and lack of interruption," said Cory. Stephen Dickman also mentioned quiet when asked about what inspires him about the Hamptons. Maybe it was the silence that allowed him to recall a melody that first came to him decades ago in grad school. That melody was the starting point for "War," a song for bass voice and cello that will have its World Premiere at Visions.

But as far as having their work performed, things may have been a little too quiet for local composers. Visions of the East End is breaking the silence. Not only is it a chance for the composers to be heard, but an opportunity for the community to listen.

Second Annual Visions of the East End Friday, March 19, 8 p.m. at the Ross School. Tickets $10. Faculty/students from any school $5.

Focus On New Business: A "Divine" Design

Two Well Seasoned Entrepreneurs Return To An Evolving Industry Here On The North Fork

By Susan Whitney Simm

Barbara Michelson is not a newcomer. After moving to the North Fork from Manhattan in the early 80s, she later launched a catering business and very successful brownie mail order operation, called it Local Talent, and hired Alphenic "Tiny" Martin, a native of Antigua, as a sous chef. But with the demands of motherhood upon them both, Barbara decided to close up shop almost seven years ago and concentrate on raising three children.

Today, the two women, all their children almost grown, have joined forces again and opened Divine Country Café, a small eatery with a Caribbean bent on the North Road in Southold. They are also revisiting the catering scene, this time with a state-of-the-art kitchen on wheels and an optimistic outlook. Times have changed here, as everywhere, and the demand for more upscale though unfussy fare has inspired both Barbara and Tiny to offer an informal menu that matches today's entertaining style.

"The marketplace was very different when we had our last catering business here on the North Fork," said Barbara. "And with our goal of re-entering that industry, we designed and built a mobile kitchen. But in order to obtain the necessary permits, we needed a commissary. So after we found this location in Southold a few months ago, we decided to open a café. And we've found that we're really enjoying it."

Obviously, the pair didn't choose the Caribbean theme at random – this is the kind of food Tiny prepares for her family every day – but Barbara feels that the tropical fare really lends itself to summer parties here in wine country. (In addition to smaller private parties, several weddings have already been booked, although the emphasis is clearly on casual rather than formal entertaining.)

Barbara used to write for The Suffolk Times. She has a degree from the prestigious Paris cooking school Cordon Bleu, and learned about pairing food and wine at Beringer Vineyards in California.

After running a private dining room in Manhattan, she and her husband moved out to Cutchogue and began growing and shipping their own produce in the early 80s. The couple now has three children, including a 16-year-old who sometimes helps out with the business.

"We had a lot of great clients for our produce business, but I guess we were a little ahead of our time," said Barbara.

Tiny Martin is a modest woman with a disarming smile. She and her family, a husband and three young girls (today all attending college), moved here seventeen years ago from the Caribbean island of Antigua. Barbara met Tiny through their children, who were friends at school. (Tiny also has a 16-year-old son and 14-year-old daughter, who both help out at the café after school. This is a real family operation!) Coming from Antigua, Tiny brought with her

Divine Country Café is located on the North Road in Southold next to Charlie's Pizza. Current hours are 9:30 a.m.-7:30 p.m. 6 days a week (closed Tuesdays). Menu includes espresso drinks, sweets such as Barbara's famous brownies, croissants and lemon currant scones, quiche, soups, mixed green and Caesar salads with chicken, steak or shrimp ($5.50-7.50), panini (grilled sandwiches, $5-6.25)), cold sandwiches ($4.25-6.25) and Caribbean-style deli salads. Friday and Saturday nights are "Caribbean Nights," featuring dishes such as jerk chicken ($8.25), rum and molasses baby back ribs ($15.75), and shrimp with West Indian Creole sauce ($13.50). Call 765-9605 to order in advance or to discuss a catered event.*

Quick Bites

Looking for wonderful braised short ribs or succulent lamb shanks? The talented chef at Legend's in New Suffolk, Michael Reilly, occasionally offers these dishes as specials, and when he does, don't miss out! They usually appear on weekends, so call in advance to see what's cookin'. Also fabulous are the Cuban style pork shanks. Slow food, a great antidote for a fast world.

Portabello on the North Road in Mattituck is known for its delicious pasta dishes, but the other night we made it a destination for steak and fish. The steak, very well priced, is available with a flavorful teriyaki marinade, topped with sautéed mushrooms. A special of striped bass atop risotto with fresh spinach, clams and chorizo was also a winner. Buon Appetito.

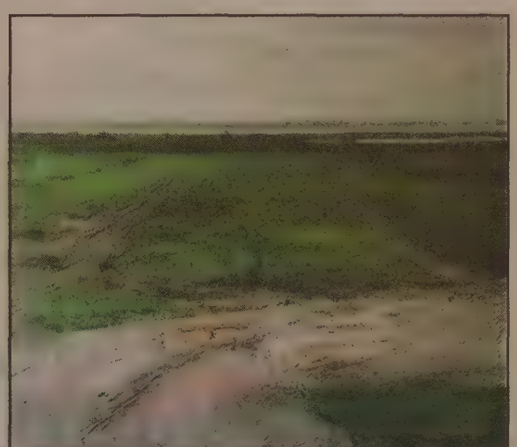
North Fork Artist Of The Week

A Man Of Many Talents: Greenport Artist Chris Stavropolis



Although Chris Stavropolis' formative study was done at the Art Student's League in New York, he has spent many years teaching both art and drama. Having shown in galleries in the East Village and the Prince Street Gallery in Soho, Chris' work is also currently on exhibit at Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead and Galerie Nouvelle in Greenport. And this spring Chris will take part in a landscape exhibit at Galerie Pelar in Greenport, where he has been a resident for the past twelve years.

According to the artist, "It was the magnificent beauty of the North Fork that turned this abstract expressionist into a landscape painter with expression. By that I mean, although the work is more representational, I still want the viewer to be involved in the physicality of the paint." Call Blue Door at 208-8166.

Four Courses, Four Wineries, Four Times The Fun

Oxnard, California, located between Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, is perhaps best known for its fertile soil and Mediterranean-like climate, ideal for growing citrus, strawberries, and artichokes. But it also offers one of the most unique dining experiences on the West Coast: a "progressive dinner party," during which visitors cruise around the beautiful Channel Islands Harbor, stopping at different restaurants for each course.

The idea of the progressive dinner party may not be a new one, but it is gaining in popularity and almost always offers a unique way to try different types of food paired with different wines. In an effort to draw more visitors to the Long Island wine region, Long Island Wine Council executive director Jane Baxter-Lynn organized a group meeting with many of the local tourism and winery coordinators in late 2003. And this past winter, manager and marketing executive Dorothy-Dean Thomas of Corey Creek Vineyards in Southold, along with Home Port B&B owner Ellen Carbonell and Bedell Cellars tasting room manager Bill Thompson, began discussing the possibility of a progressive wine dinner party with neighbor wineries.

"Ellen was looking for some off-season event ideas that could be coordinated into weekend getaways," said Dorothy. "And I recalled a conversation I had had with Bill Thompson regarding progressive dinners that his church held and thought, why not do one with the wineries? I then laid out a map and chose two other wineries that were along the route between Corey Creek and Bedell (under the same a wealth of knowledge about Caribbean cooking, and many of the dishes at the café and on the catering menu are Caribbean in flavor.

Divine Country buys produce from local growers, such as Satur Farms in Cutchogue, run by Paulette Satur and her husband, chef Eberhard Müller. The emphasis is on fresh, local ingredients.

"Our cooking has a woman's touch, like Mom's home cooking," said Barbara. "It's very straight forward food, nothing brilliant, but today people want something healthier and more flavorful. For instance, Tiny won't just boil the chicken in water for the curry chicken salad, she'll make a flavorful broth to cook the chicken in. It's those little steps that you do or don't take. That's really what the food is about."

The partners plan on doing some advertising, but find that with each party, five more get booked as a result.

"Most of our customers now are people that we have gotten to know through catering parties," said Tiny. And the food? "All the food is very good," she says honestly. Then, realizing that the comment may have sounded a little like boasting, she adds quickly, "At least, that's what everyone says!" And based on what I've sampled so far, "everyone" is certainly right.

ownership) and quickly had an enthusiastic group put together."

The result is a progressive wine dinner, scheduled for March 27, that will include four wineries: Peconic Bay Winery in Cutchogue and Raphael in Peconic, in addition to Corey Creek and Bedell Cellars.

The dinner begins at 5:30 p.m. at Peconic Bay with an appetizer of shrimp and avocado maki rolls prepared by chef Michael Meehan of the Seafood Barge. Winemaker Greg Gove will present Peconic Bay's 2002 Riesling and 2002 Steel Fermented Chardonnay. Following at Corey Creek Vineyards, chef John Ross of Ross' Rotisserie serves up monkfish and mussel curry paired with Corey Creek's 2002 Gewürztraminer and 2001 Chardonnay presented by winemaker Kip Bedell.

All then head over to Raphael where Grand Cru Caterers of Raphael chef Daniel Magill will present red wine braised short ribs. Winemaker Richard Olsen-Harbich will pour Raphael's 2000 LaFontana and 1999 Raphael First Label Merlot. The evening winds down at Bedell with cheesecake and chocolate passion cake prepared by Connie Schenone of Connie's Bake Shop paired with Bedell Cellars' 2000 Estate Merlot and Raspberry Wine. (Call 765-4186 for tickets, $125 per person.)

Though this inaugural event has limited seating, Dorothy hopes the idea catches on and will in the future be planned in conjunction with local B&B's, who could offer "Wine Weekend Getaway" packages during both the high and low seasons.

So what happens when you take an age-old idea – the formal dinner party– and give it a twist? A great new way to sample Long Island wines: where they are made, poured by their makers, and served with fare made by local talent. Who says you can't reinvent the wheel? Cheers.

Howdy Pardner: Summer On Horseback

Does your child blow out the birthday candles every year, wishing for a pony? And do you explain, every year, that the co-op board just won't allow a horse on the property? Good thing you'll be spending time in the Hamptons this summer. Whether you are here for a week or for months, horseback riding opportunities for your little ones abound in almost every village on the East End.

East End Stables, located on Oakview Highway in East Hampton, is owned and run by the husband and wife team of Chris and Andre deLeyer. The deLeyers, lifelong horse riders, teach lessons year-round, and also employ three other instructors during the busy summer months. Kylie Tekulsky, an East Hampton High School sophomore who teaches beginner students in the summer and boards her own horse, Pete, at the stable, took me on a tour of the barn, indoor and outdoor riding rings, and paddocks last weekend. She introduced me to dozens of teaching horses and ponies, and taught me a bit about how the horses are cared for, and about the structure of the summer camp. Her enthusiasm for the family environment and her love and understanding of horses painted a picture of a nurturing and professional atmosphere. The summer programs at Oakview Stables span eight weeks, through July and August, and they offer week-long sessions of three hours a day for children ages 4-14. All skill levels are welcome, and each student learns tacking and grooming as well as the basics of riding.

Beautiful Stony Hill Stables in Amagansett started its pony camp, the first in the area, in 1976. Stony Hill offers week-long pony camp sessions for children 7 and younger. In addition, they hold horse camp for children 7 and older and Short Stirrup camp for children who are interested in learning more about riding in the Show Ring. These riders receive individual instruction and attention, and will participate in at least one show during a five-week session. There is also the exciting option of showing in the Hampton Classic, if your child meets certain requirements. They also offer off season specials, year-round boarding, and lessons in dressage and jumping training.

In Montauk, Deep Hollow Ranch, the oldest cattle ranch in the country, boasts beautiful vistas, and opportunities to ride on the beach as well as in the woods and in pastures. Half hour and hour private lessons are available for children 6 and older, English or Western style. There are also 4-mile trail rides for kids 8 and up, and a 6-mile trail ride to the beach and back. In addition, you can ride for 1/2 hour with the family, including children 6 and older, or try a pony ride and visit the petting farm.

Two Trees on Hayground Road in Bridgehampton offers half day sessions, where students ages 5 to 12 learn grooming, tacking and riding at three different skill levels, including pony. You can reserve a package of lessons, where you pay for 9 and get the 10th one free. They also have lots of outdoor riding in fields and in rings, and have about 100 horses and ponies on the property in the summer time.

All of the above facilities also offer adult instruction, so you can join your kids in the great outdoors.

EXPERIENCE "THE RUSH"
8 to 16 YEARS OLD

Summer X-citement... The (Blue) Rush Is On!

Summer X-citement...The (Blue) Rush Is On!

You might not realize it looking at the thermometer, but summer is right around the corner. Well, maybe not right around the corner, but warm weather is heading our way and with it the Hamptons bustle to life. Opportunity springs (pardon the pun) for kiddies big and small to explore the lush surroundings and take advantage of Mother Nature's summertime offerings.

Enter Blue Rush, the ultimate summer day camp catering to girls and boys, ages eight to sixteen, who crave high-spirited fun and "X-citement." Conceived by David Lebwith and Bryan Murphy, Blue Rush offers a cutting-edge, extreme sports program that's high on adrenaline, adventure and safety. Staffers are rigorously trained, extreme sports certified instructors with credentials that include: ocean lifeguard certification, Project Adventure facilitation, CPR, first aid and emergency response training, and US Coast Guard Auxiliary certifications.

"The goal of Blue Rush is to take fun to the next level. While some of the activities are considered extreme sports, they're based more on the perceived feeling of risk rather than actual risk," said Lebwith. Partner Murphy concurs, "We adhere to the highest possible standards, especially when it comes to safety. Our ratio, three campers per counselor, ensures a high level of personalized attention and supervision."

For those wondering what exactly qualifies as an extreme sport, Lebwith and Murphy offer this explanation. "It's typically a non-traditional sport, one that is intense and thrilling." To meet the description the duo designed an extreme sports roster that includes a variety of sand, sea and air activities, which they feel is unmatched in the world. According to Murphy, "our program includes new cutting-edge activities such as kite boarding or wake skating, and anyone who participates is on the forefront."

For landlubbers, Blue Rush offers skate boarding, low/high ropes climbing and sand boarding (think snowboarding on sand). Sand boarding devotees begin the experience on small dunes that are not steep, and work their way to higher inclines as they increase in proficiency. Skating adventures involve street skating, carve boarding and skating in skate parks. Lebwith is quick to point out no matter the sport, "safety gear is worn at all times." Water sports include the ever-popular tubing, along with wake boarding, wake surfing (no foot straps), wake skating (uses bindingless wake board), body boarding and traditional surfing, which compared to its water sport cousins seems almost old school.

Instructor David Ortiz, Bradley Reiner, Taylor and Alex Cohen

For those who want to catch some serious air, there's kiting. The modern kite is now a high tech, high performance apparatus that is the backbone for a slew of sports – skudding (barefoot skiing on sand), kite jumping, kite body surfing, kite skim boarding, kite surf boarding, kite mountain boarding and last but not least, kite buggying.

As with all the sports offered by Blue Rush, participants learn the ABC's before advancing to more challenging adventures. Lebwith explains, "Our instructional process is a progressive learning structure that starts out with the mastery of basic skills and progresses toward mastering more advanced skills."

True to the team's desire for all to "experience the rush," the camp also offers an Extreme Sports After Camp for ages 8 and up. The program parallels the Extreme Sports day camp program, but instead lasts for two hours. Another important element in the spectrum of offerings from Blue Rush is the camp's private water sport sessions.

These sessions may be structured as a private lesson (e.g., the opportunity to learn tricks) or as a group outing. Group activities include wake boarding, wake surfing/skating, water skiing and tubing. "For families and friends they're a great time on the water," said Lebwith. "Not to mention a terrific photo opportunity."

If you are looking to try something new for the kids this summer, look no further...Blue Rush is the place to start! Besides dishing up a healthy dose of "x-hilaration" and fun, the camp's sports curriculum is designed to teach confidence, goal setting, patience, physical skills, team building, discipline and an appreciation of life. As Lebwith and Murphy point out, "Regardless of physical size, strength, or athletic ability – everyone shares in the experience of 'Blue Rush' girls and boys alike."

Dan's Papers CAMPS & RECREATION

All Summer In A Day-Camp

What are we going to do with the kids this summer?

Take heart, this is the Hamptons, and if there's one thing there's plenty of, it's choices!

Here are just a few...

Even though it's early in the season, registration is already in full force at the popular YMCA East Hampton RECenter. They're celebrating their 4th camping season with fun-filled programs for all ages...Kiddie (pre-K, ages 3-6), Youth (grades K-6), and Counselor in Training (ages 14-15). Camp activities include arts and crafts, sports, character development, swimming lessons, rock wall climbing, field trips (these are designed for Youth Campers and include at least one beach trip per session). There will also be special events... family barbeques, contests and much more. Parents are encouraged to come to the Y to meet the camp staff at several open houses. An inspired addition to their program, and a boon to harried parents trying to juggle kids and work, is the camp's Extended Day option. "This is a great help for parents working longer hours in the summer months," says Bob Mitchell, the Y's Executive Director. "Now children can extend their camp day in the morning from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. and/or at the end of the day from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m." Camp costs vary according to programs, and financial assistance is available.

Campers enjoying a fresh water pond

There's no dearth of facilities at the Ross School, and the summer programming certainly reflects that fact. Set in the beautiful East Hampton countryside, the Ross summer program offers outstanding teachers, state-of-the-art facilities, and a beautiful and inspiring place for learning, growth and personal development. The programs embrace the arts and sciences, media, and technology integration with innovative, project-based learning opportunities. Programs are divided into three age groups, each offering a medley of fascinating and unusual choices for students ages 7 to 17. Choices for ages 7-10 run the gamut from Aspiring Writers Unite, Nature Drawing & Painting, Through the Microscope, Digital Photography and Folk Tales to Puppet Theater as well as team sports. For ages 10-13, About Acting, Crime Scene Science, Fashion Design, Video Express and Modern Dance Workshop are just a sampling of delights. And teens 13-17 are sure to find something to pique their interest among selections such as Acting for the Camera, Radio, Yoga and Original Works, Jazz to Hip Hop, Fencing,

At Camp Karole of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, registration has also already started. Maddy Lawler, the camp's Executive Director, waxes lyrical about the camp's new and exciting programs. Geared to children ages 3 to 11, the 8-week program is chock-full of sports, events and activities: drama, sports and arts and crafts keep the children's attention at a high pitch of excitement as every day brings a surprise. It might be pony rides or a magician; it might be the reptile

Creative Camps For Creative Kids

Long gone are the days when a traditional summer camp was the only option. Nowadays, choices abound for parents looking to keep kids busy and engaged over the summer months. And with another school year winding down, the opportunities for learning, exploration and fun are just beginning.

If your children have a new interest you hope to foster or they are looking for a way to meet new friends and try new things, a day camp may be the perfect choice. So, whether your children are ready for their first day camp experience or are camp veterans, this guide offers you plenty of wonderful choices.

The Harbor Music Shoppe in Sag Harbor is once again offering a music day camp geared specially for kids who love music, but who are not necessarily musicians, much less musical prodigies. Every child or teen from beginner to advanced will have a place and an opportunity to express themselves musically.

Taught by professionally recognized teachers, the daily curriculum includes music theory and composition classes, live performance experience, practice instruction, ensemble and band jam sessions, voice instruction and guest clinics. Most instruments are provided. In addition, daily recreation includes swimming and tennis.

The co-ed camp is open to children aged 7-16 and will run a week-long comprehensive music program from August 25 until August 31. For more information call 631-725-0067 or log onto www.sagharbormusic.com.

Drawing class and Paperrmaking class at Amagansett Applied Arts

Amagansett Applied Arts (A3), located in a beautifully restored 100-year old livery stable, has designed a summer arts camp to give children, aged 8-13, the opportunity to sample and experience a variety of different art forms and media. Working with professional artists in small classes, the curriculum is challenging, yet complemented by specialized art activities.

The four-week camp will run from mid-July to the beginning of August, offering parents the opportunity to register children for one, two, three or all four weeks. Each week offers a different experience in some combination of the following: fine arts – drawing, painting, printmaking and sculpture; textile arts – weaving, beading, silk screening, tie-dye and embroidery; paper arts – includes papermaking, bookbinding and mask making; photography – camera controls, darkroom exposure, lighting, pinhole cameras; digital media – how to use a digital camera and manipulate photos.

Adult art classes are also offered through the school. For information including a class schedule call (631) 267-ARTS (2787) or visit their website at www.a3arts.org.

This year, in honor of what would have been Victor D'Amico's 100th Birthday, The Art Barge is initiating a series of events to "Celebrate the Centennial" and to share Victor's philosophy that "the arts are a humanizing force and their major function is to vitalize living."

In addition to many special events being planned

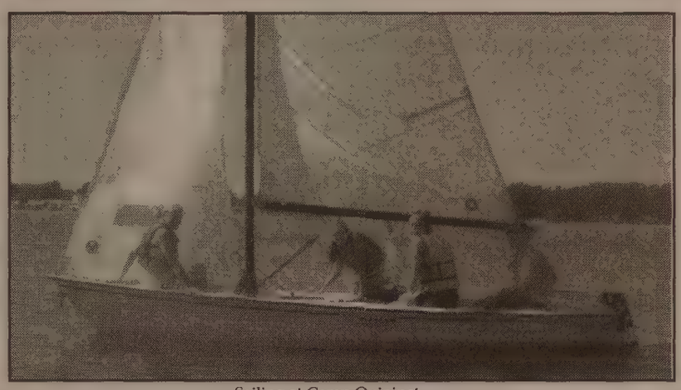
Camps For Champs

Believe it or not, summer is almost here. You know what that means. That's right, folks, those lazy, hazy, dog days of summer are swiftly approaching and before we know it, the kids will be out of school, whining, "I'm bored. There's nothing to do!" Don't you parents fret, because if you're sitting there wondering what camp to send your children to this summer, you need look no further.

For all you baseball players and fans, if your child has a love of the game, then Bridgehampton Baseball Camp, located on School St., next to the Bridgehampton Fire Department is definitely the camp for them. Under the direction of Coach Eddie McCarthy, who has over 15 years experience in teaching youth sports, the staff provides boys and girls ages 6-11 a unique and exciting opportunity to participate in a wonderful sport where the emphasis is placed on, "a camper's effort and enthusiasm over their ability." In this organized environment the children will not only have fun, but will have a chance to develop their potential and excel at their strengths while improving on their areas of weakness. The children may work on their swing on the "Iron Mike," pitching machine as well as practice their base-running, pitching, fielding, and baseball techniques. With such an enthusiastic staff of college and varsity athletes and coaches, the children's growth will definitely be seen from the inside out. The camp runs in July and August. For more information contact Eddie McCarthy (917) 353-1939 or check out the camp web site: www.bridgehamptonbaseballcamp.com.

Established in 1980, Future Stars Camps provides a wide variety of sports to choose from for even the most discerning camper. With many convenient locations, Future Stars Camps include staff members who are college players, right up to tennis professionals. At the Pine Hills Country Club in Manorville, a tennis and golf camp will be held for children ages 6-16. At the Sandy Hollow Country Club in Southampton, a tennis camp will be held for children ages 6-16. This camp will run on a weekly basis with a 2-week minimum required. At the Southampton Town Recreational Center, a sports camp will be held with the option of a 4 or 8 week session which will include; basketball, tennis, soccer, touch football, softball, and track & field for children ages 6-14. At the Green Hollow Tennis Club in Easthampton a tennis camp will be offered for children ages 6-14. For more information contact Charlie Vandercook (914) 273-8500.



Sailing at Camp Quinipet

With spectacular views from every scenic vantage point, Quinipet Camp & Retreat Center on Shelter Island will suit environmentally conscious children to a tee. For over 60 years, this camp has been an oasis away from home nestled on the majestic Peconic Bay. Quinipet offers a diverse range of activities and sports for children and adults alike. Not to mention that an environmental education program was just launched in cooperation with SCOPE and Cornell's Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County. This offers children an opportunity to work with college students to develop leadership skills and raise environmental awareness. Beginning with a training camp, 16-17 year-olds learn the skills to become counselors. In Discovery camp, an introductory experience for youngest campers ages 3-6, the children engage in nature hikes, canoeing, swimming, arts and crafts, and campfire chats. In the East End Explorers camp, children ages 7-8 travel to museums and marinas, go snorkeling and enjoy activities with a focus on local aquatic and marine life. In Wind & Wave, 5 and 6 year-olds go kayaking and sailing. Other sessions include horseback riding, sailing, biking, and choir. There is also a week-long drama session which ends with a student selected performance of a play or skit. For more information call (631) 749-0430, or check out the web site: www.umcamps.org.

as tribute, several art instruction classes for kids are offered including painting, drawing, printing, clay, puppet making, and mixed media. These classes are based on the art education principles developed by Victor to stimulate students with motivational tools as well as the natural environment, encouraging each participant to find their own authentic expression.

Another program at The Art Barge is "Art for the Family." It takes place on alternating weekends throughout the summer. Family members of all ages are invited to work together, indoors and out, exploring different projects each session, such as painting, sculpture, collage and printmaking. For more information and a schedule call 631-267-3123 or visit them online at www.theartbarge.com.

The Parrish Art Museum is kicking off the summer with a variety of children's art programs. Offerings include a four-week summer art camp where children gain instruction in Plein Air painting, drawing, pottery, sculpture, printmaking, origami, and more. Campers will also visit two East End art locations and attend the performances of the Kidsummer Performing Arts Series.

Additionally, a series of art workshops for day campers aged 3 and up will be held. A sampling of art workshops include hand-built pottery, playful watercolor painting, creative collages, mosaic designs, mono-printing, outdoor sketch and still life, "Let's Make a Mask," sculpture art and traditions in jewelry.

The Parrish Art Museum summer kid's programs are designed to encourage creativity and imagination through the visual arts and provide children with the opportunity to learn in a museum setting. man or a carnival. Or it might be one of the camp's off-premises activities such as a kayaking trip or a tennis game. But one thing's for sure...on Friday mornings, there's a Shabbat service with a rabbi and a cantor, complete with challah and rituals such as the lighting of the candles. "While there are many things that make this camp so special," says Mrs. Lawler, "the camaraderie that exists among the counselors is really unique. Their energy and their dedication are quite apparent. They look forward to coming back here year after year, and consequently, so do the kids. In fact," she continued, "that's why we have extended the age limit to 11, the kids just wanted to continue coming here so we have added programs – primarily sports – to accommodate them. It's a real case of Happy Counselors, happy campers!" Camp Karole also offers busing, and anxious parents will be delighted to know that there's always a nurse on the premises.

Peconic Dunes is a co-educational camp offering sleep away or day camp experiences for youngsters ages 8-15. It provides a wide variety of activities including basketball, kayaking, soccer and softball. Campfires and cookouts offer great opportunities for socialization, and those who want to test their mettle in the outdoors will enjoy training in outdoor survival skills, fishing and environmental crafts. Part of the Peconic Dunes summer camp experience revolves around a specialized environmental experience offered through Cornell Cooperative Extension, the marine Research Center at SUNY Stony Brook and the Center for Excellence and Innovation in Education. Named Camp SeaWolf, and designed for campers ages 10-15, three one-week sessions focus on stewardship of our precious natural resources. "With the expertise of Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County and the natural setting of Peconic Dunes, we are well poised to offer our campers a unique environmental experience," says Richard C. Hilary, Camp Director. "We have the opportunity to instill in our campers an appreciation of our natural resources. While learning important concepts about the environment, youngsters get to enjoy the outdoors through canoeing, kayaking, fishing and more." Interested parents and campers are invited to an Open House on Sunday, April 18 or Sunday, May 2 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Garden At Rock Cottage

by Lance Brilliantine

Hydrangea, A Garden Must

Starting in June, Rock Cottage is graced with one of the more beautiful and versatile flowering shrubs, the easy-to-grow hydrangea. Their dramatic flower heads appear in a range of colors from white to crimson and from lilac to dark blue. Some varieties produce two-toned colors, other have contrasting eyes, and still others are speckled or striped with alternating colors.

Hydrangeas are deciduous plants. A few tender species that grow in mild climates are evergreen. The shrubs grow from 3 to 12 feet in height. They are readily available on the East End, and most nurseries such as Marder's, Wittendale's, and Speilberg carry plants beginning in early spring.

The name Hydrangea is derived from a Greek compound word meaning "water-vessel," because the roots store a large quantity of water.

Hydrangeas originated from the Himalayas, North/South America, and Central/Eastern Asia. In the States, Native Americans cultivated the plant to cure bladder infections, arthritis, and other ailments.

There are three main types of Hydrangea flowers: panicle, mophead, and lacecap. Panicles produce long, conical-shaped flowers up to 14-inches long. Mopheads have globe-shaped flowers up to a foot in diameter. The lacecaps produce disc-like flowers about 6 inches across with florets at the circumference and colored, seed-like nodules at the center.

Five main categories of hydrangea are cultivated on the East End:

Oakleaf Hydrangea (H. quercifolia) – a 6-foot shrub with deeply lobed, oak-like leaves. The white flowers turn pink with age.

Smooth Hydrangea (H. arborescens) – a 5-foot shrub with oval, gray-green leaves. The flowers are dull white.

Climbing Hydrangea (H. anomala) – produces up to an 80-foot long vine. It has roundish, green leaves and white flowers.

Peegee Hydrangea (H. paniculata) – a 10-foot to 20-foot shrub or small tree. Flowers are white and fade to pink.

French Hydrangea (H. macrophylla) – a mounding shrub as large as 6-feet with either pink or blue flowers. (One special variety, "Ayesha," is a rare, fragrant shrub. This plant, introduced after World War II, has delicate pink-to-mauve petals. The abundant blooms and leaves have a waxy consistency that gives the plant a dramatic effect.)

Hydrangeas are easy plants to grow. They respond well to cultivation (they require protection from deer that find them an "irresistible salad"). The shrubs benefit from a site enriched with organic matter. The French hydrangeas will tolerate more sun than other varieties, though most like shade. From spring onward, the plants benefit from regular feeding and plenty of water.

Among some hydrangea species, flowers can change color based on the amount of aluminum and level of acidity in the soil. French hydrangeas produce blue flowers in acidic soil where more aluminum is present. Flowers will be pink in soils that are more neutral where they absorb less aluminum. For some white-flowered hydrangeas, the eye color of male flowers can be altered by changing the pH of the soil.

To produce blue colored flowers, add aluminum sulfate (available at most nursery supply stores) to increase acidity. Broadcast 1/2-cup of aluminum sulfate per 15 square feet of soil. To make the flowers pink, broadcast a cup of dolomitic lime per 15 square feet. It takes a full season to see noticeable change in flower color. At Rock Cottage, we have found that spreading spent coffee grounds around the plants enhances the blue color and adds to plant vigor.

The most common reasons for hydrangeas failing to bloom are winter injury and trimming the stalks at the wrong time. On French hydrangeas, prune plants immediately after blooming (never later than the first week in August). Other reasons for a lack of blooms seem to be too much shade, poor fertility, and over fertilizing with a fertilizer that is too rich in nitrogen (this produces abundant leaves and no flowers).

We believe hydrangeas benefit from group plantings for massive displays. However, single specimens placed center stage can also have a dramatic effect. Every garden deserves at least one representative of this plant!

Memorable Milk Is Back

It's the retro drink of Hamptons sybarites and the health conscious – lavishly-creamed, unhomogenized "creamline" milk. If you believe certain research studies, it's also good for your arteries. If you're lactose intolerant, it's possible you could be drinking milk again.

All milk used to be like this – rich, heady with sweet cream, and usually delivered to your door in glass bottles before dawn. Cream fills the neck of the bottle as it rises to the top. As cows begin grazing outside in the late spring, the cream turns thick, with a deep ivory color and a clear demarcation between cream and milk, the creamline. To taste such milk in the Hamptons today, you'll have to pay four dollars a quart plus a dollar bottle deposit, though prices will ease to half that at some shops by May. At the Montauk IGA, a quart of homogenized milk costs .79 cents.

Price is always relative when you're pricing flavor. When you taste creamline, you may react like Arlene, a Montauk artist, who said she once drank milk by the gallon. She sipped the creamline, then two-percent homogenized. The creamline? "Oh, God, it's totally different. I don't drink milk much anymore. This," she lifted the glass with homogenized, "is probably why!" The homogenized she judged chalky.

Creamline is silky to the palate, sensuous, complex. As it sours, fragile lactic-acid bacteria, destroyed under high heat, nudge it towards the piquance of creme fraiche. The kindest adjective for soured ultra-pasteurized is "nasty." Creamline is available in three flavors: chocolate, drawing accolades such as "a melted Ben and Jerry's;" coffee, called simply, "unbelievable;" and strawberry, which has been likened to a milkshake.

Creamline is what Ann Cooper chooses for students at East Hampton's Ross School, where she is executive chef. The creamline that will be available at a half-dozen locations in the Hamptons by late May is produced by 85 cows on the 650-acre Hudson Valley spread of Ronnybrook Farm Dairy in Ancramdale, New York. It averages 3.9 percent cream compared with 3.25 percent in full-fat homogenized. Ronnybrook milk is available now at Citarella and soon at Bogo's Food Spa, Amagansett Farmers Market, The Green Thumb, Stuart's Seafood, and The Milk Pail. There will be 12-ounce plastic "grab and go" bottles of the chocolate, coffee and strawberry priced from $1.59 to $2.39.

Until 1991, Ronnybrook sold its raw milk to an agricultural co-op. It was handled like all milk, pasteurized – currently in seconds, at 280 degrees, well above boiling, and then homogenized. This involves shooting milk through fine screens under 2,000 pounds of pressure to break fat molecules into tiny particles that remain in suspension. High-heat homogenized is sold as Ultra-Pasteurized or Ultra High Temperature (UHT). "Whatever value the natural bacteria in milk have has been destroyed in ultra-pasteurization," says Rick Osofsky, co-owner of Ronnybrook with his two brothers. Ronnybrook Creamline is pasteurized for 15 seconds at 161 degrees. Some creamline is pasteurized in vats at 145 degrees for 30 minutes.

Ronnybrook began selling non-homogenized creamline direct to consumers at Manhattan's Union Square Green Market in 1991. Today, its milk is sold at a half-dozen of the city's green markets at $3 a quart, plus deposit. Greenmarket customers arrive in the Hamptons wanting creamline. Many buy it for health.

Deep-cream milk is the stuff of memories and something to ponder, given low-fat fixations. "I remember how my mother scooped out the wonderful cream, you actually scooped because it was so thick, and put it on fresh berries. I guess all that fat is bad for you," mused another artist.

The stories creamline producers tell are almost legends in natural health circles. They maintain that in non-homogenized milk pasteurized at low temperatures, lipase, an enzyme that breaks down fat, essentially causes milk-fat to self-destruct after the body absorbs its fat-soluble nutrients. They say enzymes may be the reason many lactose-intolerant can drink creamline milk without a problem. One food scientist was skeptical; asked about the advantages of homogenized milk, he said, "The consumer doesn't have to shake it up, and it increases the digestability of milk." That assumes one wants to drink it after tasting creamline.

Police Blotter

Two men were described in last week's Police Blotter as being arrested for dealing drugs in Hampton Bays. While en route back to headquarters with the two prisoners in custody, police officers were passed by a car traveling at a high rate of speed. The officers were able to pull the car over and subsequently arrest the man. The subject, a 59-year-old College Point man, was found to drunk and was charged with DWI.

Police arrested a 24-year-old Center Moriches woman last week. The Cottontail Run woman hopped into a friend's car and made a mad dash before the owner of the vehicle, an East Hampton man, was able to contact police. East Hampton Town Police officers eventually tracked the woman down while she was in custody at the Riverhead Jail. She's being charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the second degree.

Fifty logs were reported stolen from an East Hampton man's driveway on Saturday. The Three Mile Harbor Road man told police that it may have been the landscaping crew that works at his house once a week. However, neither he nor police have ruled out the ever-growing population of beavers in New York. The unsplit logs will cost $100 to replace.

'Tis the season for scum bags who steal fishing equipment. A Montauk man reported the theft of $2,100 worth of fishing rods, reels and a radio from his unattended apartment. Upon investigating, police found pillows and blankets on the floor and an ash tray suggesting the intruders spent the night before making off with a $100 radio and four Penn fishing rods and reels collectively worth $2,000. Police are still investigating.

It seems as though some St. Patty's Day drunkards are getting a head start on their public disturbances this week. Four youths were issued warnings in Hampton Bays after causing a commotion as they yelled at passing cars. Officers arrived at the scene to find the rowdy foursome sitting on a curb with no alcohol in sight.

HANG TEN
Dear Dan,

My favorite Dan's story is this week's In Search of the Perfect Wave...

Surfers
Sea is tears of the moment
Resting on waters
Rocks one to prayer
Surfers wait for the breath
Surfers are content
Walking on water
Patiently awaiting the breath
"And he breathed on them."

I spent my 16th birthday in Maui, and I relate to the search for the wave. I too, love the sea and staring out at its vastness. A miracle it is. I went through hurricane Floyd in Florida as I lived there six months before coming to Long Island. The waves again...As all are perfect, touching my soul.

Thank you, Dan.

KINDRED SPIRITS
Dear Dan,

I usually don't do this, but I just had to add to your story of the beggar in the parking lot at Kmart. The very same night you were there, I ran into this same person. Asking only for a dollar. Fear and then sorrow spread through me. I stopped, loaded my car and then went driving through the parking lot until I found him. He was so bedraggled that I was never sure if it was a man or woman. Anyway, I handed him a $20 bill and wish it could have been more. He leaned into my car and hugged and hugged me clinging to me and saying he was turning 40 next week.

I, too, drove away with tears running down my face. In this land of milk and honey we all live in, this was heartbreaking! It was a freezing night and yet what could I do? I have enough fear inside me to be unable to reach out more to this person. My dream would have been to take him home, give him a bath and warm dry clothes and feed him until he was full. Then give him a comfortable place to rest and help him begin a new life. But, oh no, we're all too scared to reach out to the needy anymore. Like you said, they could have picked our pocket, etc.

I, too, haven't been able to get this person out of my mind. I've always felt I would like you if I knew you, but now I know I would.

You see, I'm from Oklahoma City. I own a home on Prospect Hill in Montauk. I see beggars in Oklahoma and Texas all the time, but the Hamptons–never.

I just wanted to add this tidbit to your interesting and touching story.

May I also take this opportunity to tell you how much I love Dan's Papers. It's the highlight of my week as I can peruse it and find the things I'd like to do each week.

Thank you for sharing the Hamptons with the rest of us.

CAR TALK
Dear Dan,

I enjoy Bob Gelber's articles in Dan's Papers especially the issue of February 27, 2004 which deals with mechanics.

I own (like new) a 1970 Cadillac convertible De Ville and I need a mechanic since the guy who really knew my car moved to Texas. Would you know of anyone in the White Plains area or new to Bridgehampton?

In 1959 I bought new, a Citroen ID 19 and enjoyed it greatly for many years. One of your previous articles mentioned that you too had this car. I recently went to France for two weeks and did not see an ID 19 or a DS anywhere – too bad; these were truly great cars.

Many thanks to Mr. Gelber's anticipated help.

SENTENCED
Dear Dan,

Martha Stewart is convicted of four counts out of five and may receive two to twenty years in jail.

Please advise what Senator Edward Kennedy received for contributing to the death of Mary Jo Kopechne at Chappaquiddick back in 1969.

HELPING HAND
Dear Dan,

"Experience is not what happens to a man; it is what a man does with what happens to him", according to Aldous Huxley. Perhaps the answer is to donate to the local homeless shelter or pantry, or to volunteer to run a fundraiser. We all appease our consciences in different ways; sometimes, prayer is the only answer. Bless you for reminding us of the least among us.

ROOF OVERHEAD
Dear Dan,

I'm writing in response to your letter written about your personal encounter with the homeless man that touched your heart and soul. I too, have had such an experience that has led me to helping the homeless.

My husband had told me about a man living in a box in our local area. I really didn't want to know about it, as I just knew I would not be able to rest until I checked things out. It was true; the man didn't even have a box and was sleeping on the ground in the woods, using a stack of newspapers for a pillow. I won't go into detail, but that was the beginning of my getting involved in trying to do something for the men, women and families that are in such need.

My church has been housing the homeless this winter, giving these people a place to sleep, a hot shower, food for dinner and also food for breakfast and a packed lunch as they leave church the next day.

A committee of women, myself included, have published a cookbook in support of the homeless entitled Feeding The Hungry Heart. The cookbook sell for $15 and the money raised goes for anything the homeless need. I have included one for you along with this letter. If you know anyone that would like to support this cause by buying a book, please either get in touch with me or have them call me at 631-298-8229.

Thank God you reached out to the homeless man, as I know you will feel the effects of doing such even more so than he does.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

Last Tuesday I cast my vote at the Cosmetic Executive Women (CEW) Beauty Awards product demonstration. CEW was founded in 1954 and boasts a membership of over 2,500 women who work in the industry. The organization annually honors new and innovative beauty products in every category, including bath and shower, hair color, moisturizer, and skin care, to name a few.

This year, the line to enter the venue stretched around the block and stopped traffic as thousands of career fashionistas, decked out in requisite New York black, impatiently tapped their stiletto heels as they waited over an hour to get inside. Why the turnout for an award you've probably never heard of?

The voting is the great giveaway of all time. To gain trial and votes, the brands give away actual product. Once credentials are cleared, you are presented with a large, over the shoulder canvas bag and then admitted to the biggest free-for-all of the year

You dive into a sea of women scrambling, laughing, pushing, and shoving to snap up name brands like Avon, Chanel, Clinque, Bath & Body Works, Biotherm, Dior, Estee Lauder, Geurlain, Kiehl's, Lancome, Prescriptives, Orgins, Sheseido, Nivea, Johnson & Johnson, Revlon, etc. Unsurprisingly, the aisles getting the most pounding were skincare and make-up, where Chanel compacts were grabbed like candy, and Clarins was snatched up faster than popcorn. The fragrance tables evaporated in the first fifteen minutes and one marketing rep actually had to slap back greedy hands to keep her display.

Joan Rivers was there, pumping the flesh and tossing out samples of her new skin care line. One has to admire her spunk and tenacity; at seventy, she is hustling her product alongside women fifty years her junior. I swung by three times just to watch her in action. While her product doesn't interest me, I find Joan fascinating.

The aisle getting the least activity was hair color. I needed a break and wandered the tables until I found a smart product that actually delivers on its benefit claims. ColorMark has a patent pending for instant hair color to touch up gray roots. Essentially, the applicator resembles a mascara wand that you can comb through your roots, and in seconds the gray is gone. It is available in all shades of blonde to black. Sadly, it won't lighten dark roots, but I bet they have it in the works. It retails for just under $20 and is the perfect quick fix when you can't get to the salon. However, like Cinderella... beware. The color is not permanent, and if you are caught in the rain, Prince Charming will see your true color.

I did a final venue sweep before heading home, lugging my booty. The awards will be announced in a few weeks, but the winners were all us women who waited on line and got to carry home hundreds and hundred of dollars of free products, most of which we will probably never use, but feel all the better for having.

Now, how about a true confession? As you may recall, I am participating in Gurney's Fitness Challenge, and have been trying to lose body fat while shaping up. Candice Monte, Gurney's fitness director, is leading the charge. She is a woman with "to die-for" abs, boundless energy and unbridled enthusiasm for working out. In her presence, you can do things you never thought you (or any human being) could do, like cardio-circuit training, where she puts a class through its paces by rotating participants through a series of exercises. Think musical chairs, except you don't get to sit down. Instead, when the music stops, you move on to another workout. In this class, we moved through boxing, squats, hopscotching, step, and jumping rope. Just putting on the boxing gloves pooped me, but then as I started to punch I actually felt great, imaging a couple of people who could benefit from a quick jab in the gut. In fact, it was a great stress reducer.

But, here is my confession: Sister Candice, I have fallen off the program. Life has gotten in the way of my workouts. In the past two weeks, the only weight I lifted was my luggage into an overhead bin. (Okay, I am fibbing about that...I begged the man behind me to do it.) I was slovenly. I traveled on business and had meetings at breakfast, lunch and dinner. I did not eat well (I wasn't paying for it and aren't all calories null and void on the road?) I sat for five hours on a plane and felt my heinie spread while I watched a movie and drank a decaf coffee with Baileys (makes the airline brew palatable).

Forgive me, Candice. I have sinned. It is not fair to end my six-week challenge on this fat note of despair. Instead, I have come to realize that fitness is an ongoing challenge. One I am committed to, but I realize that there will be times when I fall prey to distractions. So, I have learned to take a breath, face the music and head back into class. Because I am not giving up on me.

Candice, get out the gloves...I'm coming back!

MUSIC

Songwriter seeks collaborator(s). After a 15 year hiatus during which I established a successful non-music business; former major label record producer & published/recorded songwriter seeks counterparts in Sag, EH, etc., on weekends to jointly write, arrange and record. I write both words and music (but again, the ideal collaborator also writes both), I sing, play guitar and keys. You in addition to being an accomplished writer & perhaps a good singer, are some combination of an accomplished musician, programmer and hard disk recording whiz. My goal is to find the great writing partner I never had 15 years ago and to produce some good work. Send an email link to a couple of your songs (gxw@aol.com), or send to Box 2691, Sag Harbor, NY 11963
